TRADE REVIVAL FOLLOWS GOLD SUSPENSION

London (UP)—Another large decrease in unemployment, an advance in the pound sterling, and increasing evidence of a trade revival due to suspension of the gold standard, added impetus Wednesday to the general election campaign.

Voting takes place Oct. 27. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and candidates of the national government party continued a straight fight with the old line laborites led by Arthur Henderson, liberals loyal to Lloyd George, and supporters of the "new party" of Sir Oswald Mosley.

Disturbances at election meetings were common. At Bikenhead, the conservative candidate, Major Allen, was knocked out during a fierce struggle which included fist fights. Deeds and chairs were used as weapons. Police used their truncheons.

MacDonald overcame the attempts of hecklers to disrupt an address at working in behalf of John Malcolm. The prime minister had several previous conflicts with miners in his audience and the appearance of Sir Oswald Mosley precipitated riots in Birmingham and Glasgow.

One of the most disturbing factors of the campaign was the report that foreign communists had financed 25 communist candidates and planned to form a "united fighting front," namely strikes and mass action, regardless of the outcome of the election. The only unusual feature of the campaign, however, was the rowdiness displayed at various meetings.

Politicians did not concede the communists a chance of winning a single seat in parliament. Five communists were arrested for adopting the slogan of "class against class" and promising that any government could be defeated "if millions of workers, soldiers, and sailors form a united fighting front."

LOSS OF DIRECTION BLAMED FOR ILLS

Loss of direction by "Mr. X," the unknown individual, is the cause of the present depression and this must be found and followed in order to restore the world to normal conditions, Rev. Fred Albany Well, pastor of the Unitarian church, told the Rotary club Wednesday noon in a philosophical discussion of conditions as he views them.

It is up to the individual to decide upon a working principle of life, taking this from the standpoint as the whole and not a section, he said. The working policy rather than admiration of things he sees and experiences, as example a man votes "against" something or another individual rather than "for" that individual.

No system of life is final and the finite cannot animate the infinite because the system depends upon the individual as no chain is stronger than its weakest link, the speaker continued. This, and every individual, is the mysterious "Mr. X," Rev. Well said, who is always looking for something stable in a world of change and whatever is sought must be found within the individual.

The individual, Rev. Well said in closing, is guided by distrust rather than admiration of things he sees and experiences, as example a man votes "against" something or another individual rather than "for" that individual.

SALARY CUTS FOR TEACHERS CONGRESS TOPIC

Eugene (AP)—Resolutions regarding salary cuts for teachers are expected to occupy the attention of the annual meeting of the Oregon congress of the Parent-Teachers association here. The convention will name a committee to investigate such reductions and to consider expenditures of school tax monies.

With 145 delegates and many visitors present at Wednesday's sessions, reports were read and group meetings held. Mrs. Charles E. ## SECOND CROP OF PEARS HARVESTED

Two months ago Mrs. F. W. Ebenhardt, 1178 North Commercial, earned her Bartlett pears for the year as other good Salem housewives did, and the job over, sighed in relief.

But nature ruled otherwise, or perhaps does not know of the overproduction in many lines, and so Wednesday Ebenhardt brought to the Capital Journal office "second crop fruit." Some of the pears exhibited were slightly larger than big Italian pears and others not quite as large as Royal Anne cherries.

Ebenhardt, who has had experience in growing fruit for many years, admits that he "has never seen anything like it."

PROXY GOVERNMENT RULING IN FRIDAY

I. H. Van Winkle, attorney general, said Wednesday that he would not be prepared before Friday to the earliest to render the opinion requested by Secretary of State Hal Hove through the state board of control on the legality of a member of the board of control voting on verbal matters by written or board proxies.

Questions raised by various attorneys as to the legality of the votes of Governor Meier on the resolution by which W. H. Bailey was recently removed as superintendent of the state training school for boys led Hove to ask for the opinion. The governor's vote on that resolution was contained in a letter to State Treasurer Holman and cast by Holman in the absence of the governor.

Hove also requested an opinion on the right of one member of the board to hold a meeting of the board in the absence of the other two members and transact official business. The law creating the board of control provides that two members shall be present to constitute a quorum.

SEEK SERUM FOR PARALYSIS

Here's a chance for public-spirited citizens to do a great benefit to the community. The only requisite is that the public-spirited citizen shall have suffered at one time or another from infantile paralysis; not necessarily a severe case but even just enough so they knew they had it.

The Marion county department of health is asking all residents in the county who have had infantile paralysis, whether in any mild form on up to severe cases, to register at the public health office if they are willing to devote a very small amount of blood to make a human serum for use in new cases of the disease.

There is no danger from infantile paralysis in this county at present, in fact there has been only one case in Marion county this year, but there has been an increase of the dread disease in southern states this year and Dr. Vernon A. Douglas, county health officer, is trying to arrange the most efficient and effective protection. The human serum provides the best help for infantile paralysis cases found so far, although where the serum is not available or is of doubtful the blood of a parent of the suffering child is sometimes injected into the patient's muscles, according to Dr. Douglas.

Several county physicians have called into the health office for a supply of infantile paralysis serum and the health department is anxious to have some on hand. There is some in Portland at the Doernbecher hospital, but Marion county physicians want some here, too.

It is best to make the serum from a small amount of blood from a large number of people. Dr. Douglas says, since a more average serum is secured. The serum will not be made up just now, but the department wants the names of volunteers on file to call upon them when the serum is being made up. "And the process of securing blood doesn't hurt the volunteer," Dr. Douglas smiled. "So tell them they aren't any pain as a penalty for helping out."

RICHARD DIX WEDS PORTLAND BEAUTY

GIVEN PATENT ELECTRICALLY DRIVEN SAW

An electrically-driven hand-saw which probably, before long, will be part of the standard equipment of machine and wood-work shops of all kinds as well as of meat shops, is the very interesting invention of J. A. Young, Salem, route 7, and Fred Bryan of Selo. A patent has been secured, and the inventors are now looking about for some method to get the saw on the market.

The saw, of course, can be made in various sizes. The model displayed by the inventors, is about 3 1/2 feet long, driven by a one-fourth horsepower motor. The connection between the motor and the saw is a flexible shaft, so the saw may be carried about the shop wherever needed, just as a vacuum cleaner is carried about the house.

The saw is built into an elongated channel frame. It is driven by a return screw drive to which is attached a cable which operates the saw, giving it a four-inch stroke, for the convenience is a job saw and not a band saw. About 477 strokes a minute is the estimated speed. The frame is of aluminum, making the device very light in weight.

The saw may be used on bone, wood or steel. It is so widely different from anything else in use that the patent right was readily granted at Washington, and apparently there is little doubt that it will find its way into the market in the near future.

TO ASK BIDS ON PHYSICIAN HOME

RAIL OFFICIALS DELAY COMMENT

St. Louis (UP)—Heads of railroads with headquarters here delayed comment on the interstate commerce commission's rate plan Wednesday although union officials generally attacked the commission. Manion, president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers and his wife were criticized because of the commission's action, and I believe that a 10 per cent increase, at least, was justified," Manion said union wage scales, in his belief will not be cut because "payrolls are now at their lowest possible level."

Similar attitudes were expressed by local representatives of various other rail union groups.
