MEMORIES OF DALLAS RECALLED, SCHULTZ

Dallas—Memories of Dallas in the eighties were recalled the other day when John Schultz exhibited a photograph of the first transfer rig ever operated in the town. The picture, which was taken in 1881, shows Schultz standing on his one-horse cart, opposite Rowell's blacksmith shop on Main street. While it did not look capable of handling much of a load, John says that he has hauled as high as three tons on his cart. After operating the business for four or five years Schultz sold out to John Grant who also ran the business for a period of five years. Hauling was confined to inside the city limits and according to the original pioneer of the game in this city yielded a fair livelihood.

Quilts and Tables Occupy Grangers

Jefferson—The Morning Star Home Economics club met recently at the grange hall for an all day meeting. Quilting and sewing quilt blocks were the main features of the day.
