COMPANY SUES FOR REDUCED EXCISE TAX

of lumber that year at $2.60 per thousand feet, book value and had an actual cash value of $4 a thousand. The commission, says the complaint, accepted a value of $4 a thousand feets as a proper value to be allowed under similar returns for cutting similar timber in kind, quality and location and the company filed an amended return wherein it claimed allowance for such timber cut at $4 a thousand amounting to $186,765.98 in excess of the allowance claimed in the original return. It showed, says the complaint, that by reason of the greater stumpage value its net income for 1929 was $142,515.48 less than shown in the original return and that its actual net return for the year was $532,321.93. By its amended return the company waived any claim for allowance by reason of its property being situated outside of Oregon and gave 100 per cent of its property as being situated in this state. It did allocate to Oregon 90.09 per cent of its wages and 10.50 per cent of its sales and 66.86 per cent of its net income or $349,224.44 and showed its property tax was $1746.12 and demanded rebate of $3808.09 from the commission. The commission, however, in a letter to the company, says the complaint, asserted that the entire net income must be allocated in Oregon and demanded an additional tax of $12,924.86 on account of its excise tax. A formal hearing was held by the commission after which the commissioner refused to grant the greater stumpage allowance and undertook to assess the plaintiff at 5 per cent of its net income of $844,837.41 as shown in the plaintiff's original return and demanded that it pay the further sum of $12,924.86. Plaintiff was also notified if the payment was not made interest would be charged, now amounting to $2584.97 and a further penalty of 5 per cent.

She complaint charges the commission's acts are wrongful, arbitrary and beyond its lawful powers and denies the plaintiff of equal protection of the laws.

JAPANESE ATTACK REPELLED BY CHINESE

they said, were unchanged.

At midnight, amid desultory firing in the ruined Chapel quarter of Shanghai, the Chinese were busy strengthening their defenses, apparently expecting a general attack after the Japanese army reinforcements are landed Sunday.

At that hour there was a lull in the battle of Woosung.

(Copyright, 1932, by Associated Press)

Shanghai, Feb. 13 (AP)—Japanese airplane and big guns pounded the wrecks of Chapei and Woosung today with the heaviest bombardment since the fighting began two weeks ago and claimed they had stopped a Chinese counter-attack.

Promising reports of peace negotiations, through the medium of the ministers of the United States, Great Britain and France also were shot to pieces when Nelson T. Johnson, American minister, who arrived here yesterday with the British and French diplomatic representatives, said he knew of no such peace prospects.

The voice of 100 American residents of Shanghai was raised in protest against the Japanese activities in a cablegram to United States Senator William E. Borah at Washington. Their protest was against what they called the violence of Japan's methods. They feared, they said, that if Japan were successful world reliance would again be placed on armed forces and the cause of disarmament would lose all it gained since the world war.

The Japanese planes were out early, a few minutes after 8 o'clock this morning, to begin the thundering attack on Chapei again. Six of them followed up a bombardment which was begun by Japanese howitzers in the fog and mist. The heavy fire scattered menacing Chinese troop concentrations, the Japanese naval command said.

The booming guns and bombs shook the city as it had not been shaken since fighting began two weeks ago. When the fog began to clear away the planes could be seen, seeking out their objectives, then swooping down to release their loads of destruction and death. The bombardment awoke the three foreign ministers and they hastily grabbed telephones to learn what it was all about.

A Japanese spokesman said large bodies of additional troops were off Woosung and they would probably be landed with in a few days. Then, he said, a big Japanese push might be expected. The Japanese command considered the time not yet ripe for a forward movement, he said. The spokesman at Japanese naval headquarters said the warships were having things about as they pleased at Woosung. They steamed back and forth opposite the forts, he said, shelling them at will.

Hoover Touches Off Campaign Spark In Lincoln Day Address

Washington, Feb. 13 (U.P.)—President Hoover set off the spark of his own campaign for reelection in a non-partisan Lincoln day address from the White House last night. Republican party leaders followed him with less modest speeches at Lincoln day dinners from coast to coast. They laid down their tariff and other issues in true political style and—likening Mr. Hoover's patience in the face of obstacles to that of Lincoln—called directly for his renomination.

The Lincoln study from which the president spoke heard no sound of the applause that rose from republican rallies at his remarks; the microphone was placed on the same desk where the Civil war president wrote his emancipation proclamation. Above it was a life-like portrait of the immortal. Mr. Hoover confined his remarks to that theme.

"While we are in the midst of the difficulties of this day," he said, "we may well entertain the feeling that history will record this period as one of the most difficult in its strains and stresses upon the timbers of the republic that has been experienced since Lincoln's time.

"There are enduring principles and national ideals to be preserved against the pressures of today.

"The forces with which we are contending are far less tangible than those of Lincoln's time. They are invincible forces, yet potent in their powers of destruction. We are engaged in a fight upon a hundred fronts just as positive, just as definite and requiring just as greatly the moral courage, the organized action, the united strength and the sense of devotion in every community as in war

"I am confident of the resources, the power and the courage of our people to triumph over any national difficulty. They are rallying to their responsibilities."

It was the first speech Mr. Hoover has made in a political background since his candidacy was officially announced.

Senate floor leader, Watson, followed the president, speaking from a Lincoln day dinner here. He analyzed the president's record in office and said:

"What president, save alone the sainted Lincoln, was ever more maligned and misrepresented than the one who has just addressed us? And what president more than he who today sits in the loftiest seat on earth has ever been so traduced and aspersed?

"No president's name in the list has labored more earnestly, or toiled more ceaselessly, or striven more honestly to lift the nation out of the slough of despondency into which it had been plunged by sheer force of conditions.

"Yet no critic has risen to say that he would have pursued a different course or adopted a contrary policy had power to do so been committed to him."

AINSWORTH, HANLEY EXQECTED TO STICK

the necessity of taking drastic and decisive action to straighten out the tangle that has developed.

EARLY ACTION DUE

There are reliable assurances that the governor will take such action early next week, probably Monday, but what the exact nature of his action would be was not divulged today.

Two courses of action are open to Governor Meier, it is generally agreed by both his close friends and critics.

He must either remove from office Commissioner Charles K. Spaulding of Salem, whose antics in "sniping" at the engineering department, the majority members of the commission and everything else connected with the highway administration have been the cause of all of the wrangling, and seek to induce Ainsworth and Hanley to continue to serve with a third and new commissioner, or he must appoint an entirely new commission.

With a three million dollar road construction program for 1932 just getting under way it is not unreasonable to presume, close friends of the governor point out, that he has no desire to create an entirely new commission of men totally unfamiliar with the business and duties of the commission at this time. This theory gave color to apparently reliable reports from Portland during the day that Governor Meier was seeking to influence Ainsworth and Hanley to remain on the job with a definite understanding that Spaulding be given his walking papers.

Whether such a proposition would be acceptable to Ainsworth and Hanley is another matter upon which no definite information was to be had from either directly. Ainsworth was away from Portland in a weekend holiday trip and Hanley was evading all attempts of reporters to locate him in Seattle. This much is known, however—it will take more than the promised removal of Spaulding and his sniping to induce the other two commissioners to reconsider their decisions to quit.

WANT FREE HAND

Those who are in a position to know what they are talking about assert that both Ainsworth and Hanley are agreed that the affairs of the commission cannot be successfully and efficiently administered by any commission unless the governor agrees to keep his hands off the actual business of running the highway department. They are willing that he should decide the policies to be followed, but they insist that the responsibility for carrying out those policies shall be left to the commission and that the engineering department shall function under and through the commission.

Another point in connection with the situation that is pretty clearly established is that Governor Meier would suffer no embarassment in removing Spaulding. Spaulding, on the other hand, has been causing no end of embarassment to the governor and in some quarters has made himself distinctly offensive to the executive's political interests by openly adopting as his own the ideas of retrenchment and economy which the governor promulgated when he took office a year ago.

Further, there is no room to doubt that the governor resents the obstacles Spaulding has been throwing in the way of the smooth inauguration of the retrenchment program worked out at a conference with Ainsworth and Hanley three weeks ago. No sooner had this "administration" program been announced than Spaulding started to "throw rocks at it", to use the expression of one close friend of the governor.

The fact that Governor Meier is understood to have previously told Ainsworth that he would fire Spaulding unless the latter mended his ways is taken as further evidence of the truth of the assertion that whatever action the governor takes, Spaulding's days on the commission are numbered.

None of the principals in the present controversy had anything whatever to say today that would shed any light upon the possible solution of the tangle. Ainsworth and Hanley let the matter rest with their previous refusal to discuss the matter at all, and when asked in Portland if a statement might be expected from him today or Monday, Governor Meier is reported to have replied:

"For all I know there may be no statement."

Interviewed in the highway commission offices here this morning Commissioner Spaulding said "I know nothing except what I read in the papers. It appears that I am only on the sidelines in the controversy."

Construction of the Tunis-Casablanca railway, started in 1920, is to be completed shortly.

ROW ENLIVENS ISLAND PARLEY

with democrats who advocated freeing the Islands.

Hurley, expressing the administration's viewpoint that the Islands should not be given independence until economic independence is assured, registered mounting anger under the questioning of Senators Cutting, republican, N. Mex., and King, democrat, Utah, who have measures before the senate for independence.

When King began asking him a question, the secretary started to answer before it was finished.

"Just a minute," exclaimed King, "you try to answer before the question is asked."

"You have absolutely undertaken to distort what I said," exclaimed Hurley, his face flushed and his voice rising angrily.

"I resent what you said as untrue, as some of your other statements have been," King shot back.

It was then that the secretary of war arose and left the crowded committee room.

Previously Senator Cutting had told the secretary that when asked "a simple question" he had made a "stump speech in reply."

"If I say anything here that is in opposition to you gentlemen," Hurley returned, "it's a stump speech, but what you gentlemen say is the height of statesmanship."

Hurley asserted it had been "a kind of lese majesty" to hold an opinion contrary to that held by members of the committee.

When the discussion once turned upon the stability of conditions in the Philippines, King remarked "we're not very stable in the United States now, economically."

"I disagree with these statements about the United States being weak and off color," exclaimed Hurley. "Let's be Americans once in a while and have faith in our stability."

Hurley said the bill sponsored jointly by Senators Hawes, democrat, Missouri, and Cutting, was characterized by "weakness" and providing for "tutelage" of the Filipino people.

Cutting objected to these words.

Immediately after Hurley left the room the committee went into session behind closed doors.
