A five gallon jar of water from Altamont Springs, seven miles west of Salem in Polk county, was brought to the Capital Journal office Monday morning with a request that employees of the newspaper try it out. The water, while not a typical mineral water, is said to be healthful. J. E. Richardson is owner of the Altamont Springs.

Cecil Barkell, who claims Sheridan as his home community, and who, police say, is insane, is held at the city jail and the officers are at a loss as to what disposition to make of his case. Communication with Sheridan indicates that his home is not there as he claims. Marion county officers refuse to handle the case, presumably on account of the care taking that the state now brags against the counties for patients committed to the state hospital for the insane. The officers say Barkell is of the type that should not be at large.

FINDS JOBBERS SHELVES BARE CANNED FRUIT

Grover Hillman of the Hillman and Cleary Canning company in West Salem returned this morning from a five and a half weeks' selling trip through the east and reported the acquisition of some good business.

While, he stated, eastern jobbers are chiseling the prices down on all fruit as much as possible, nevertheless he says that the shelves of these jobbers are in a Mother Hubbard state and bare as a bone as far as Oregon fruits are concerned. Canned peaches he asserted, are the bugaboo of the fruit market now and as this is a leader in canned goods it is materially depressing the market, especially as to canned prunes. He stated there is a world of California canned peaches available in the east as well as canned peaches from other sections and that these are being sold at prices too low to afford belief.

He said in a general way things appear to be looking up in the east. The stock market has caused a good reaction and he states that one could hardly pick up an eastern paper without reading of some new factory resuming operations.

Hillman visited New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, St. Paul, Minneapolis and other cities and said that generally conditions were about the same in all the sections visited.

Continuation of— LEGION RESENTS

nant—they make no bones about the resentment they feel toward the republican national administration's very apparent endeavor to influence the action of the convention upon matters which they feel are the Legion's own business—the Legion's stand on the question of immediate payment of adjusted compensation certificates and the Legion's attitude toward the forcible expulsion of the bonus expeditionary force from Washington.

On every hand, in hotel lobbies, in headquarters rooms, around convention headquarters and on the streets one hears the indignant comment that for the first time in the history of the Legion politics has been actively injected into its deliberations.

Since the first of the delegations arrived this has been the talk. There was criticism of the activities of Hamilton, McNider, former national commander recently recalled from his ambassadorship to Canada to campaign among the veterans for President Hoover. There is pointed speculation concerning the presence of the convention of Patrick J. Hurley, secretary of war, and the very conspicuous endeavor of numerous politically active veterans from over the county to block a formal demand by the Legion at this convention for immediate payment of the bonus is being generally interpreted as the work of the administration.

The reaction is an expression of determination to adopt a bonus payment resolution, notwithstanding President Hoover's opposition, and there is a strong sentiment favorable to the passage of resolutions openly condemning the Hoover administration for the bonus army riots.

While the sentiment in this direction was general among most of the delegates and many of the national officers arriving for the convention it did not take on a serious crystallized aspect until this morning when the Oregonian, under Washington date line, came out with a full page devoted to the text of the report on the investigations of Attorney General William D. Mitchell of the bonus army riots.

The report of the attorney general was transmitted to the public with the full endorsement of President Hoover, whose statements were also printed by the Oregonian on the same page.

To the printed report of the attorney general, classifying some of the veterans in the Bonus Expeditionary Forces, and associating all with "criminals" the reaction of the convention veterans was instantaneous and positive. It was assailed everywhere as a political maneuver, released as it was on the eve of the convention opening, and condemned as such.

What measure of restraint that had been evidenced by more conservative legionnaires in mentioning President Hoover and his campaign in connection with these legion issues was immediately wiped out. The prevailing sentiment among the legionnaires today was openly and enthusiastically anti-Hoover, and they made no pretense at holding it, asserting that it was the Hoover forces which forced the question of politics upon them. Their resentment was further fanned by a telegram addressed to the convention by J. A. Lazar, national commander of the Veterans' Hoover club, asserting that Hoover was right in the ousting of the B.E.F. from Washington.

Lazar's telegram was branded widely among the veterans as a deliberate attempt to inject politics into the convention. Convention leaders were agreed, even many who are known to be pro-administration, that there seems to be a determined movement under way to block any direct or implied criticism of the administration in whatever resolutions may be adopted by the convention, and that the movement is ill-advised and dangerous.

State politicians are also very much in evidence around the hotel lobby and other gathering places, but for the most part they are doing very little "politicizing." They simply want to be "in on the big party" and seem to be satisfied with just keeping themselves in

NIGHT SESSIONS TO SPEED UP AURORA TRIAL

Inimation was given by Circuit Judge Wilson as the case against B. F. Gleay and Zeno Schwab, defendants in the Aurora trial, tonight sessions might be inaugurated due to numerous complications delaying progress of the trial. Half a day was surrendered from the case today because some of the attorneys were required to appear in supreme court on the school tax argument. All day tomorrow recess will be taken due to Governor Meier's legal holiday for the American Legion parade. The morning of the trial resumed today when he told the court the United States court of appeals would be in session Wednesday and Thursday and he would have to be there for a half a day, but just what half day was not sure yet, but it will mean another half a day recess. While not stating positively, the statement would indicate if progress was delayed he may put them in order.

Zeno Schwab, cashier of the defunct Aurora bank, finished his direct examination shortly after court opened this afternoon with his counsel, Walter Winslow, taking him over a number more angles as to the $6000 note on which his trial hinges and the various points of a number of points from his copious notes.

Cross-examination then started which Special Prosecutor Goldstein predicted would use up the entire afternoon.

It was evident that the special prosecutor was taking a specific tack in cross examination in an effort to bring out a certain phase in the handling of the funds of the bank and securities of the mortgage company of which Schwab was cashier of the one and secretary of the other. And that was the intimation that as fast as mortgage notes came due it was the system used to stall off payment by the mortgage company as long as possible, but whenever the customer being made to arrange a campaign company through its secretary dipped into the funds of the bank of which the secretary was cashier to meet such notes.

The cross examination also was due to go into the various phases of mortgages and notes of the loan company and their use as securities in taking funds from the bank.

Uvalde, Tex., Sept. 12 (AP)—John N. Garner, democratic vice-presidential nominee, plans to join Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt at Topeka, Kan., where the presidential candidate will deliver a campaign speech on agriculture.

Charles S. Hand, who has been assisting in arranging a campaign tour for Garner, said the Texan would leave his home for Kansas City late today or tomorrow.

Support
Here and there will find a group of Oregon's political wise boys congregated and talking shop, but so far they have showed no inclination to inject their problems into legion business. They seem to be agreed among themselves that Earl Snell, of Arlington, has the speakership of the house for the 1933 legislature all sewed up with present pledges of 42 votes, and that Senator Fred Kildie, of Island City has the presidency of the senate clinched.

That both Snell and Kildie are legionnaires is only incidental. The Oregon politicians find the most meat for their lobby discussions in the threatened break between Governor Meier and Rufus Holman, state treasurer, over the Holman-Elnitz squabble, and over the probable outcome of Holman's treasuryship race with Judge William Maloney, of Pendleton. The Eastern Oregon onlookers bring word of a very definite trend east of the mountains for Maloney, even among the republicans, and they predict that if Holman presses Governor Meier too far in the Elnitz matter the governor will throw his support to Maloney.

There are unverified rumors about here that Maloney has already been given assurance that when the proper time comes he can expect some help from the state administration—that Governor Meier feels that Holman has "double-crossed" him and is no longer entitled to the executive's support.

From information gathered here and there about the lobbies from persons who usually know what they are talking about this much seems certain—Elnitz is not going to lose his job as state purchasing agent simply because Holman demands his scalp. Governor Meier is a reliably reported, is going to stand squarely behind Elnitz and Hal E. Hoag, secretary of state, is going to maintain his past position of neutrality in matters between Meier and Holman.

In this event when the Elnitz ouster resolution comes before the board of control next week, if it does, it will have one affirmative vote from Holman, a negative vote from Governor Meier, and Hoag will not vote.

WASHINGTON TO VOTE TUESDAY AT PRIMARIES

Seattle, Sept. 12 (AP)—Some 208 candidates for political and judicial office rested their cases before a jury of half a million Washington voters today, as the zero hours of their campaigns neared.

Last minute speeches, rallies and radio talks were forthcoming in their rebuttal, in a final effort to swing the 500,000 registered voters to their cause in the state primary which is to be held tomorrow. Republican and democrat nominations for United States senator, national representatives in the six districts; governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer, attorney general, land commissioner, superintendent of public instruction, state senators and state representatives will be decided by the people's actions at the polls Tuesday.

While the democrats and republicans are pondering their choices for office Tuesday, minor parties, such as the liberty, prohibition, socialist, socialist labor and other will be in convention, drawing up their tickets which will be presented for voters' approval in the November general election.

Nearly 5,000 absentee ballots cast by the American Legion members who are in national convention in Portland, Ore., point to the high degree of interest being manifested in the coming vote scramble.

Governor Roland H. Hartley spent the day in Snohomish county, winding up with a night meeting in Everett, his home town. Another homecoming is scheduled as Clarence D. Martin, democratic gubernatorial candidate, terminated a drive for Spokane votes.

Senator Wesley L. Jones wound up his state tour at Port Angeles. Homer T. Bone and Lloyd Black, democratic senatorial aspirants, concluded their vote drive in their respective home counties, Pierce and Snohomish.

Lieut. Gov. John A. Gelliatly, running for governor as a republican, was to make a radio speech tonight, then hurry to Mayor John F. Dore's "town meeting" at the civic auditorium.

Mayor M. G. Tennant of Tacoma, another republican candidate for governor, addressed himself to Seattle unemployed today. Judge Adam Beeler, republican opponent of Senator Jones, winds up with radio talks.

BEVAN TO TALK TO CONTRACTORS

Arthur Bevan, secretary-manager of the Red Cedar Shingle company, with offices in Seattle and Chicago, will be in Salem Thursday evening to make two addresses under the auspices of the Salem chapter, Oregon Building Congress. Mr. Bevan is regarded as one of the leading authorities in the country in his type of work, and both addresses are open to the general public.

A dinner meeting will be held at 6 o'clock Thursday at Hunt's cafe, and Mr. Bevan will make a talk particularly of interest to lumber dealers. All lumber dealers, lumber manufacturers and shingle manufacturers in Salem and vicinity are invited.

Mr. Bevan will speak on building activities and trade conditions and will conduct a question box at an open meeting in the chamber of commerce auditorium at 8 o'clock Thursday night. The talk will prove of special value to carpenters and joiners, and all interested in building construction in which shingles are used.

Harry L. Potter, association editor of "Timberman" will accompany Mr. Bevan on his trip to Salem and will make brief remarks at both the dinner and open meeting. Because of the program Thursday night, the regular business meeting of the Salem chapter, Oregon Building Congress, has been cancelled for Monday night.

HEALTH UNIT TO CHANGE QUARTERS

The headquarters of the Marion health unit, which have been located in a dwelling house near the high school for several years, will probably be moved to the new quarters on the second floor of the Masonic building early next week, according to Dr. Vernon Douglas, county health officer. Clinics will continue to be held in the old quarters during the remainder of the week. Some alterations in the rooms to be occupied will be necessary, Dr. Douglas says. He was engaged Monday in working out plans which will result in the greatest efficiency and convenience both to members of his staff and to the public.

While many of the students who will enter school this week and next have had the necessary physical examinations, Dr. Douglas says, all first, third, fifth, seventh and tenth grade pupils who have not been examined since the first of the year will have to be looked after while those entering the local school for the first time, including transfers from other districts will be given examinations.

Oregon City, Ore., Sept. 11 (AP)—The body of Nellie Varazzos, 65, a bachelor living near Clackamas, was found by neighbors this afternoon in his barn.

Police said the evidence was that Varazzos had been murdered. He was found on the floor with deep wounds in his chin, neck and hand. A blood-stained pitchfork was leaning against the wall. Several bloody clubs were also in the corner.

An unidentified man was seen visiting the Varazzos home about 11:30 p. m., police said they were informed. A search was launched for the man.

SALEM TRIO TO ENTER FINALS TONITE

The vocal trio representing the Salem unit, American Legion Auxiliary, will enter the finals in the auxiliary's national vocal contests Monday night in Portland. The trio will compete in the national finals by virtue of being one of the ranking musical aggregations competing in the preliminary contests held Monday forenoon. News that the Legion Auxiliary trio had competed successfully in the preliminaries and would appear in the finals tonight was received Monday noon by local friends, and it was expected a large delegation of Salem friends would be on hand to cheer for the Salem group in the final contest.

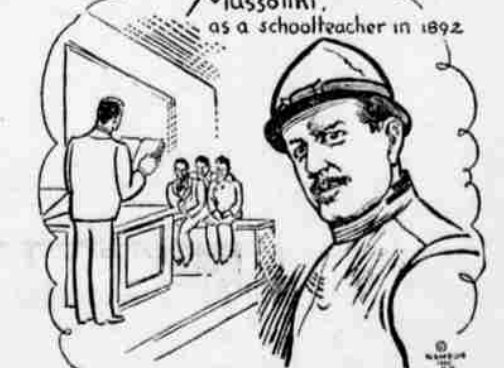

The vocal trio is composed of Mrs. Grace Zosel, Mrs. Bernice Bove and Mrs. Mildred Wyatt. It is the newest of the musical groups to be sponsored by the local Legion Auxiliary, which has long sponsored a quartet and formerly sponsored a large glee club. The trio has been coached by Miss Lena Belle Tartar. The accompanist for the trio is Miss Ruth Bedford.

JUNIOR Y BOARD DISCUSSES PLANS

Activities for the fall and winter were discussed Saturday and Sunday when members and leaders of the Salem Y.M.C.A. junior board held a conference at the Oceanic camp. Discussions in which all of the party members had a part, were indulged in concerning the problem of how to interest more boys in the work of the Y. Better lobby programs and more volunteer workers for the association, after a four hour conference, it was revealed that the junior board will take on more responsibility during the coming months. A detailed calendar, outlining objectives and events for several months in the future, will be placed in the office of Gus Moore, boys' work secretary.

RUN DOWN BY AUTO PASSES IN HOSPITAL

C. C. Smith, whose home was on rural route No. 2, Turner, died at the Salem General hospital early Sunday morning from injuries received when he was run down by an automobile Saturday afternoon near the Waddle service station on South Commercial street. The driver of the car was Lloyd E. Johnson of Turlock, Cal., who was on his way to the American Legion convention in Portland. With him were two other Legionnaires and the wife of one of them. Officers were not disposed to attach much blame to Johnson for the accident. He was meeting a car coming from the opposite direction at the time, and apparently had his attention on it until too late to avoid striking Smith.

Smith received fractures of both legs, fractured nose and concussion of the brain. He was taken to the Salem General hospital where he died. He is survived by his widow and six children, the oldest being 16. Smith was 44 years old.

HIGH SCHOOL TUITION CASE APPEAL ARGUED

Arguments in the county high school tuition fund case before the supreme court today took on much the complexion of previous legal arguments heard orally and in briefs but with the plaintiffs' attorney, Roy F. Shields, bearing down especially on the powers of the clerks of the school districts. Specifically the ground of attack was the arbitrary right given to the clerks to fix a valuation on school buildings and write off the depreciation. This, he stated, was one of the 15 items which were taken up by the cost of education. From the court's findings in this regard there is no appeal, he said, other than through some such procedure in the courts as is now under way. He stated otherwise there was no manner to probe into the justice of the valuations fixed and depreciation written off and thus doubted the validity of such findings.

The defense attorneys in leading a large appeal against this attack depended largely on a case of the Oregon supreme court covering the forest fire patrol tax and also the Illinois statute, identical to Oregon's, and the findings of the court there as to that statute. In the first fire patrol case defense counsel contended that an exactly similar situation exists as to the school tax, that the state forester may fix the levy and there is no appeal from his decision other than through a proceeding in the courts similar to the one here.

While other points were raised Shields stressed this one particular point, stating he did so without waiving any of the other arguments advanced in the brief.

SCHOOLS PREPARE TO OPEN MONDAY

Preparations for handling the nearly 1500 high school students and the thousands of grade pupils who will resume their class work in Salem for a nine month period beginning next Monday, gathered momentum Monday as teachers and school heads buckled down to the task of
