

STATE OFFERS READING COURSE

Out of a job? Wondering what to do? "Consider a reading course," suggested state librarian, Harriet C. Long.

"Courses in reading covering practically any subject are available to Oregonians at the state library merely for the postage costs of mailing books," said Miss Long. "Each course treats a single subject and is prepared by a specialist for the reader's pleasure and advancement. It is reading with a purpose."

Electrical engineering, interior decorating, salesmanship, English and short story writing are a few of the subjects recently filled by the library, Miss Long said.

Scores of other courses are available immediately. If special subjects not yet prepared are desired, the state library staff will compile special outlines, Miss Long announced.

"The first book of each course is a short volume giving a general survey of the subject to be undertaken. Included is a list of books supplying a progressive reading course toward a definite end."

The list of subjects runs from the general head of "appreciating art" to "occupations and hobbies." Courses include architecture, great American books, literature, figures of history, U. S. in recent times, history, philosophy, psychology and its use, and the human body and its care.

"Capital and labor unemployment, economics, foreign relations, biology, physical sciences, salesmanship, advertising, journalism, home economics and flower gardening are other subjects."

Woman Mixes In Football, Injured

Myrtle Point, Ore., Nov. 21 (AP)—Mrs. R. L. Tucker of Myrtle Point has had the experience of being carried off a football field in the manner of an injured gridiron warrior, but none of the satisfaction of competing for the alma mater.

Mrs. Tucker started across the gridiron just as the Coquille and Myrtle Point eleven went into action. Caught in the maelstrom of a scrimmage she was taken from the field with a broken leg.

Angel residents who wish may leave their $1 at the Bank of Mt. Angel if they wish to become a member.

The Red Cross has accomplished a great deal of good in Marion county in the past and is making plans to aid the local relief committee this winter.

EYERLY'S REPAIR STATION APPROVED

The Eyerly Aircraft corporation now has a department of commerce approved repair station, being the first organization of this kind receiving this high rating and one of three in the entire Pacific northwest. The U. S. department of commerce awarded the certificate after Lieut. Glen W. Neal, department of commerce inspector for Oregon, gave his final approval of the setup.

The shops have adequate facilities and personnel to handle major overhaul of both engines and airplanes.

A new reinforced concrete dope and paint room 45 by 30, has been constructed large enough to house a good-sized airplane. It is fitted with sliding steel doors made in the Eyerly shops, fire curtains, automatic fire doors, four flood lights, large paint racks and ventilation system.

The plant also has its own steam-heating system which assures the correct degree of temperature at all times.

A complete fabric room has been installed in the main shop for sewing, cutting and covering airplane wings and fuselages. Modern equipment is furnished throughout and a considerable amount of new machinery has been installed.

Jack Rhynsburger of the Transcontinental & Western Air Express at Kansas City, Mo., has been employed by the Eyerly corporation to take charge of the engine mechanical department.

Mr. Rhynsburger is a department of commerce licensed mechanic and a veteran in the aeronautical field. He is also a pilot and was a member of the famous Dixie Flying circus many years ago barnstorming when throughout the entire United States.

Rhynsburger is a graduate of Iowa State college of Engineering and attended the Des Moines university.

He was employed by the Cessna Airplane company at Wichita, Kan. when that company first started operations, being their field manager and operations supervisor. Later he was employed by the Boeing Air Transport company of Cheyenne, Wyo., where he had charge of engine installation after which he became affiliated with the Transcontinental & Western Air Express, supervising all engine installation and assembly.

cages still are to come for trial. The corporation department is in such shape that the new commissioner will have an easier time than as experienced during the last two years, Mott hoped. Efficient conduct of the office is dependent on a commissioner who understands the state savings and loan law and the "blue sky" statute dealing with securities. Desire and ability to enforce the statutes are necessary.

FARMERS ARE BUSY

McKee—Dan Murphy has a crew busy getting turkeys ready for market. He will have 50 or more to dispose of for the Thanksgiving rush in Portland. Frank Fessler and sons are busy sorting and sacking potatoes for the market. The potatoes are in the warehouse on the side-
