of Abraham, and the centuries before when wheat was widely used as money and stored in temples, he would form a super-central bank embracing the Empire.

This institution "would hold the gold and the wheat as assets, and on the other side of its balance sheet there would appear corresponding balances to credit of the currency-issuing authority of each country, against which local currency would be issued.

"Therefore, a debit to the account of one country and a credit to that of another would be tantamount to a transfer of so much gold and so much wheat, without necessarily the gold or the wheat even leaving the vault or elevator in which it was stored."

Continuation of— LEGISLATORS

the opening or the regular session he would cooperate to the extent of signing it promptly.

Whether it be strategy or just common horse sense, the governor will not so much as presume to assume the perogatives of the legislative body, will respect the constitutional powers and dictates of the house and senate, and will not even go so far as to take advantage of his constitutional privilege of recommending specific legislation to them.

His procedure in connection with the special session and the tax matters to be considered will be to lay before the lawmakers his findings as to the present condition of governmental finances and his ideas of the needs and prospective revenues for the coming biennium. He will, it is assumed, paint the picture of a state already $20,000,000 in the red and facing the prospect of a deficit of twice that size two years hence; the present burdensome nature of taxes upon property, and the necessity of further revenues from a property tax or some alternate scheme of raising money to preserve the credit of the state, and protect the counties against operating deficiencies and default upon their debt obligations.

He will not specifically advocate a sales tax, an income tax or any other kind of tax, or presume to tell the legislature that they must provide a substitute for the property tax.

Those matters he will leave to the legislators themselves, although he will likely commend to them the elaborate tax studies which have been made by the tax commission.

While the foregoing statements do not eminate from the governor, and are in no manner official pronouncements, they are received from sources so well informed on administrative matters as to be considered authentic forecasts of the policies to be followed by the executive. Further, they form a logical program for dealing with the situation.

A dictatorial attitude would invite and provide an excuse for opposition to whatever the governor might propose, and there are those among the legislators who are not going to need much of an excuse to don their fighting clothes.

To propose a specific tax measure would be but to make it a prolonged target for attack, and perhaps defeat what may turn out to be the most logical solution of the problem before it has a chance at fair consideration.

To deny the legislature whatever time it feels it needs to work out the complicated puzzle would be to give substantiation to the suspicion already expressed in some quarters that the short special session idea is a strategical maneuver to compel enactment of a pre-determined tax plan by steamroller methods.

In outlining the situation which necessitates a special session it is now considered probable that the governor in his message may suggest to the legislature that whatever alternate tax plan they devise and enact, if any, be referred directly to the people at a special election, rather than wait for opponents to invoke the referendum by petition. The wisdom of such a plan is apparent.

Whatever plan the legislature may enact is certainly going to be carried to the people by its opponents—and there will be opposition to any scheme devised—and to require circulation of petitions to secure a referendum would only be to invite a more determined and better organized campaign against the bill. Any measure meets with opposition at an election directly in proportion to the fight made against it.

Governor Meier, it can be said with confidence that the prediction is to be fulfilled, will simply attempt to impress upon the legislature the necessity for action.

In that position he may be wise beyond surface appearances, when it is considered that with one or two exceptions the members of both houses who have been recognized for the knowledge of tax matters during the past few years will not be back, and it probably will not take the lawmakers many days in which to realize how inadequately equipped in technical knowledge they are to deal with the problem. They will then, it is safe to say, turn to the tax commission and its guidance.

The ideas of Governor Meier and those of the tax commission run closely in the same channel along tax lines.

tence. I do not think she regrets it. I don't see that her becoming a mother should alter the case. I have been a mother four times.

"They say it was not murder. I don't know what it was then. He tried to keep her back eight or ten minutes and then she slipped up and grabbed his gun. She is the only one who said he slapped her.

"I know he couldn't have struck her, knowing as I do how kind and generous he was. He would have found some other means of carrying her in.

"She shot him twice and while he lay on the ground helpless, she shot him two more times with the bullets which killed him."

In addition to "Abie" Elliott Harris, Jr., 6, Mrs. Harris has twins, James Lloyd and Mary Anne, 4 years old the day their father was buried, and Gettys, a 10-months-old boy. She and her children have been making their home here since the officer was shot last July 17.

Mrs. Snipes contends she shot the officer in self-defense.

"I don't think I should die this way," she said as she sat in her cell. "I am not prepared to go this way."

Harris stopped the Snipe's automobile to search it for whisky. Finding none, he sought to arrest the Columbia man on charges of reckless driving and driving without a license. Mrs. Snipes testified Harris struck her and she grappled with him for his gun. When the first shot was fired, she said, both held the weapon. She fired the other shots because "I was nervous and excited," she testified.

Mrs. Snipes was convicted at York December 6 and was sentenced two days later to be electrocuted April 7, the first woman to receive the death sentence since the state installed the electric chair 20 years ago.

as 10 per cent of the children out with colds and flu, but others reported very few absences.

Marshfield, Ore., Dec. 21 (UP)—The epidemic of influenza which struck the coast district full force during the unprecedented cold wave recently was believed on the wane today, although several schools are still closed and it is estimated probably 1000 people are confined to their homes in Coos county alone. Marshfield's flu victims probably number around 300.

Bandon schools were closed yesterday noon, and several outlying schools including those at Powers, have been closed for several days. Deaths due directly to influenza have been confined to two infants who succumbed during the cold weather.

Drenching rains were succeeded by sunshine here this morning.

Astoria, Ore., Dec. 21—(UP)—Many cases of influenza, chiefly among children, are reported throughout Clatsop county. The Jewell school has closed because many of its pupils are down with the ailment and the Gearhart school also closed today. Westport and Waunda report many cases. Several social events in various communities have been cancelled in the past week due to influenza. Few cases are of a serious nature, it was reported.

Eugene, Dec. 21 (AP)—More than 200 cases of influenza have been reported in Lane county, health officials reported today. There are few serious cases.

One school, the lower Camp Creek school, was closed on account of the epidemic, the county school superintendent announced.

Thirty-two cases were reported to the health office in one afternoon.

in San Jose, Calif.

A few minutes later newspapers in the area received hundreds of telephone calls asking the source of the shocks. Most of the queries came from persons reporting swaying chandeliers or stopped clocks. Rumors to severe damage in remote areas was quickly investigated and discredited.

Seismologists agreed the quake centered in Nevada, where several minor tremblors have been recorded in the last few years. Professor Perry Byerly of the University of California computed the epicenter of seismic vertical as "probably somewhere in Nevada." Seismologists at the University of Santa Clara agreed.

The pens on the recording instrument at the University of California at Berkely were thrown from the drum at 10:10 p. m., and were replaced seven minutes later when another shock threw them back into position. Professor Byerly said the record of his instrument was comparable to that of 1925 when the major part of Santa Barbara, Calif., was destroyed by an earthquake.

Reports from Reno, Ely, Gerlach and Austin, Nev., indicated the shock were severe but no damage other than broken windows was reported. Officials of the Western Pacific and Southern Pacific railroads, operating lines through Nevada, said there had been no interruption in train service nor any damage to railroad beds or rolling stock. Residents at Gerlach denied reports a water tower in that town had been razed.

Residents of Rawlins, Wyo., felt the shock and persons in Needles, Calif., far to the south of the Colorado river, said the ground had trembled.

At Sacramento, Calif., police on duty in the state capitol building said the structure swayed and creaked. The tallest building in the city, a 16-story office building, swayed noticeably.

Many persons in office buildings, hotels and apartments rushed into the streets.

The shocks were comparatively light in San Francisco but were distinctly felt. In the interior California valleys many communities, including Sonora, Fresno and Modesto reported distinct tremors. Cities as far south as Long Beach and Los Angeles said the earthquake was distinctly felt but caused no damage.

Residents of Salt Lake City reported buildings shook, dishes fell from shelves and chandliers swung in wide arcs. Motorists said it seemed their cars were being "pushed over" during the disturbance.

Reno, Nev., Dec. 21 (AP)—A violent earthquake that rocked the western United States last night seemed, from reports received here today, to have centered in the Dixie valley section of Nevada along a line between Mina and Winnemucca.

It was in this region a major earth fault occurred in 1915.

Six distinct shocks, the first at about 10:10 p.m., and the last at 6 a.m., today, were reported at Fallon. Several chimneys toppled there but damage was confined to broken windows.

At Springer's Hot Springs, 40 miles west of Lovelock, the water levels in the springs dropped on foot. At Lovelock, the quake rang the schoolhouse bell and shook chickens from their roots.

The crew of a Southern Pacific passenger train arriving here from Mina today reported the quake was so violent the engineer stopped the train and waited until the tremor had subsided.

Klamath Falls, Dec. 21—(AP)—The earthquake that shook a great area of the Pacific slope last night was felt at Bieber, Calif., just south of the California line on the Great Northern and Western Pacific railroads.

Reports here indicated that the quake did not extend into Oregon.

Denver, Colo., Dec. 21 (UP) — An earthquake which shook the west last night would have been a disaster of first magnitude if it had not originated so far below the crust of the earth, Father A. W. Forstall, seismologist of Regis college told the United Press today.

Father Forstall's prized instruments were almost wrecked by the temblor, although a survey showed the quake was not felt in Colorado or Wyoming, except possibly in the far southwestern corner of the latter state. Rock Springs, Laramie, Rawlins, Casper and Cheyenne were unable to confirm reports that the quake had been felt in Wyoming.

"The quake was violent but was very deeply centered," Father Forstall said. "That is why the quake was felt over such a large area and why, despite its subterraneous violence, it did little damage at the surface.

"Had the quake been closer to the surface and of the same violence, it would have done tremendous damage. I could not get a clear record of what occurred because the quake was so violent. A little more and it would have wrecked the instruments entirely."

Father Forstall said the quake doubtless changed the inner structure of the earth, but that its waves lost force rapidly as they pushed toward the surface.

He said it was impossible to predict whether the quake was the forerunner of others.

Three Old Hats Man's Donation for Needy

Chicago, Dec. 21 (UP)—A man who said his name was MacGregor walked into the Cragin police station.

"I understand the police are gathering contributions for the needy," he told Desk Sergeant Charles Anderson. "And I want to do my bit for the poor."

He departed after handing over a paper-wrapped parcel to Anderson, who thanked him for his kind contribution.

Then the sergeant opened the bundle. It contained three old straw hats.

something" Premier Paul-Boncour will give considerable authority and initiative to his fellow ministers.

It was forecast that M. Cot, a brilliant, 37-year-old lawyer who has been working with M. Paul-Boncour in law practice, and who distinguished himself at Geneva by his fight for reduction of armaments, will have considerable powers on foreign questions.

Mr. Marriner, who was at Geneva simultaneously with M. Cot, renewed acquaintance with him today and was understood to have received M. Cot's ideas on the debts. It was believed, however, that Mr. Marriner had no instructions to deliver concerning the American position.

In the closing hours of the chamber debate on December 14, M. Cot in a speech supported former Premier Herriot's thesis that France should pay the December interest and honor its signature.

"What we wish is general cancellation of all war debts and of all debts which were born from the war," he said.

Later he said: "The day when the economic conference is held and establishes the balance of accounts of Europe towards the United States it will be seen that it is technically and materially impossible for Europe to pay the war debts."

It was reported in chamber and diplomatic circles that the Paul-Boncour cabinet will make changes in the French diplomatic corps and that this is likely to affect Washington, a new ambassador arriving there about the time of Franklin D. Roosevelt's inauguration.

Conferences of this committee with merchants, druggists, hotel associations or any organizations interested will be held before legislative changes and enactments are proposed.

A sane distribution of beer based on carefully prepared legislation is the program of the hop growers association and strict enforcement of drunken driving laws is one feature of it.

It was reported at yesterday's meeting that most growers are holding down the sale of hop roots as recommended by the association and no great expansion in hop planting is looked for.
