Back to the Beginning

Governor Meier is to be commended for vetoing the bills repealing the state property tax and placing the state on a warrant basis. Both vetoes were necessary to sustain the state's credit. Had the legislature provided some other revenue to replace the property tax, the repeal bill could have been permitted to become law. The warrant bill would have further demoralized state finances.

It might have been an advantageous political play to let the repeal bill become law and throw on the legislature the responsibility of replacement revenue, and thus win the plaudits of those demanding the abolition of the state property tax, but the consequences would have been disastrous and reacted in the long run adversely to the governor, for he would have been held responsible for calling the special session—and responsible for not presenting a revenue raising program for enactment.

As it is, after two weeks, the legislature is back where it started from, with only an increase in state deficit of some $20,000 to show for its efforts. At any rate, the regular session has undone the damage the special session wrought. Although the governor has not yet presented a definite program he has plenty of opportunity to assume the leadership expected.

Referendums Assured

One thing the legislators do not want to lose sight of, and that with the spirit of unrest, dissatisfaction and resentment ruling the land, it must mainly confine itself to tax reduction and budget trimming rather than to augmenting revenues. Any additional taxation, whether it be sales tax, nuisance tax, income tax or what not will be referred and the referendum sustained by the people, regardless of necessities or consequences.

The state is an impersonal entity to most of the people and viewed as a grab bag for personal gain. Under the era of paternalism with its orgy of reckless expenditure of public funds, the primary function of government, the maintenance of liberty, justice, peace, order, personal and property rights and suppression of crime have been supplemented by a host of services for which it is illy equipped.

It is now demanded that the state furnish employment, provide pensions, subsidies and bonuses, feed the hungry, furnish doles, salvage debtors, fix prices, regulate profits, supervise industry, agriculture and the professions, enter the power business and a thousand other activities which have multiplied bureaucracy, necessarily increasing taxation and piled up a mountain of debt—all at the demand of the people themselves or of organized minorities who balk on paying the bills and who after the bursting of the bubble of inflation, cannot pay them.

The remedy of course is to eliminate these public services and bring government back to its original fundamental purposes, but every effort at such retrenchment meets the organized opposition of beneficiaries—who want to eat their cake without paying for it. Yet the day of reckoning is approaching, if not at hand, as Governor Meier hints.

Glass Bill Filibuster

The bitter opposition at Washington to the Glass banking bill, which has culminated in the filibuster by Senator Huey Long of Louisiana and others is due to the branch banking feature, which it is alleged would cause a further centralization of wealth in the hands of the big banks. Such branch banking as now exists is under the guise of chain banks controlled by holding concerns.

The purpose of the bill is to prevent bank failures by placing the assets of large banks at the call of smaller ones in emergency. It is branch banking that has prevented failures in Canada. North of the imaginary boundary line between the two countries, Canada has had one bank failure since 1923, and south of it there have been 8887 bank failures from 1923 to December 1, 1932, which has been augmented since.

With over 9000 bank failures in ten years in the United States, and only one in Canada, it is clear to anyone that what our banking system needs more than anything else is something to keep banks from busting. Senator Glass, the best posted man on finance in the senate, or anywhere else for that matter, holds that branch banking is the best remedy. Unless a better one can be suggested, it should be given a trial—for something should be done.

The measure contains regulatory safeguards against too great financial concentration by utilizing the Federal Reserve system. Senator Long's greatest contribution to finance is virtually bankrupting the state of Louisiana in four years by increasing its indebtedness $29,000,000. If he has a remedy other than billingsgate oratory, he should present it. So far he is only interested in increasing the national indebtedness as he did that of Louisiana.

STARKER WINNER IN DAMAGE SUIT

The jury in the damage action of Frank Monner, administrator of the estate of Frances Monner against J. A. Starker brought in a sealed verdict at 2 o'clock this morning which when opened by Judge Lewelling today revealed that the jury had found in favor of the defendant Starker. The jury went out about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Daisy Vick acted as foreman of the jury. The action was one for $10,000 damages for the death of Frances Monner. She lost her life in an automobile accident on North Commercial street when she was in a party returning from the Chicken Roast on the highway late at night. Allegations were made that Starker was driving at a terrific speed when his car skidded, hit a curb and rolled over. Monner had also been charged with involuntary manslaughter but the day before the damage action started this case was

HOGG BROTHERS LEASE STOREROOM

P. H. D'Arcy has leased his State street store formerly occupied by Pulop's to Hogg Brothers of Oregon City for a term of years, occupancy to start February 1. The Hogg brothers have been in the furniture business in Oregon City for 25 years where they have operated very successfully. They will open here as agents for the Easy washer for which they have taken the Marion county concession. The store here will be under the management of Carl Hogg, one of the brothers. Providence, R. I. —Although the smallest state in the Union, Rhode Island ranks 13th among the 48 states in total resources of banking institutions. dismised on motion of District Attorney Trindle on written statement of the girl's father who asked that dismial be had.

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon

Washington—A few days before Mr. Coolidge died, Mr. Hoover privately sent out a nice little personally signed letter of thanks to nearly all Republican campaign workers. This was done on a scale never before attempted. There must have been between 3,000 and 4,000 letters. They went down to the bottom of the list, even below county chairmen.

That may sound like a social item but it is not. Mr. Hoover has given other inside indications that he does not intend to abdicate politically when he leaves the White House. Those who have counted him out failed to count on Fate.

Candidates for 1938 are only indirectly involved. Nobody has any idea that Mr. Hoover would care to run them. Certainly Mr. Coolidge was not a candidate. The only question is whether the old order, which prevailed before Mr. Hoover came in, should be in charge or whether the Hoover Boy Scouts should keep control.

Before Mr. Coolidge died it was plain to insiders here that Mr. Hoover would actually direct it. From that you may understand that the death of Mr. Coolidge changed the sub-surface order of things here far more than will ever be publicly known.

There are dozens of delightful anecdotes never before published about Mr. Coolidge. The one about his heavy financial conference with the late Dwight Morrow is best. Morrow was with J. P. Morgan then. He rushed to the Black Hills where Mr. Coolidge was vacationing in 1926 to tell him about an international financial phase he thought was perilous.

For fifteen minutes he expounded to the silent Mr. Coolidge on the necessity for action. He pleaded and exhorted but could strike no fire. Finally Mr. Coolidge interrupted him by asking: "Do you like dogs?"

When Mr. Morrow recovered his equilibrium he said yes he liked dogs all right, but that this was a problem which had to be dealt with, etc., etc. He was almost oratorical for another fifteen minutes. Then Mr. Coolidge inquired: "Do you like Chow dogs?"

It dawned on Mr. Morrow that he was making no headway. He dropped the subject and never returned to it in his three day visit. Subsequent events apparently justified Mr. Coolidge's subtle refusal to get into the matter.

There is another one that should not be lost to posterity—how Mr. Coolidge taught management of grasshoppers to a secret service man in the Black Hills. It was the secret service man's duty to keep the grasshoppers and to bait the President's hook with them. He used a cigar box. Every time he opened it to get one grasshopper, two or three others escaped. The President watched the excitement in silence for some days. Then he said tersely: "Get a sock."

The secret service man was doubtful but he got a sock—a silk one. It worked beautifully. When he opened the top of the sock the grasshoppers remained down in the thin silk area where the light was. He extracted them by one with no waste.

There was a good reason why rail stocks went down when Mr. Coolidge died. He was one man whose name carried sufficient weight with a large section of the public to promote confidence in a plan for railroad adjustments. His associates on the Commission can put out the same plan but his prestige will be lacking.

When prominent men die their friends always say it was a great loss to the country. In this case it is true.

The State Department was barely able to control itself when Japanese Ambassador Debutchi called to say Japan had no intention of invading China proper.

Debutchi made a similar call when the first invasion of Manchuria was started. He looked at the heavens and said Japan had no ambitions in Manchuria. He promised she would go no further. When the invasion spread to Tatsienin he also called to say that was the end and occupation would not expand. When it expanded to Chinchow he again called to say positively, etc. When it took in all of Manchuria he neglected to call.

The State Department has no information—confidential or otherwise—that the same process is now to be repeated. But it has misgivings. Roosevelt workers promised privately last week to put dairy products on the farm bill to curb some opposition. . . . Plenty more obstacles face the bill in the Senate. . . . You cannot even get money that it will be passed there this session, but it will be . . . If anyone thinks Vets appropriations are going to be cut substantially this session he has another thought coming. . . . The report on Veterans economies probably will be ready about March 3 when it is too late to do anything. . . . Mr. Woodin gave $35,000 to the Democratic campaign chest. . . . He ought to get something. . . . The Roosevelt-Congressional conference in New York was informed of the fact that two Class One railroads face receivership unless something is done. . . . Lamont Belin is supposed to have had an understanding that he would be kept in Warsaw by the Democrats before he went there as ambassador. . . . The idea is that the Duponts who sponsored him contribute to both political parties. . . . Strong efforts are being made also to keep Ambassador Grey in Tokyo. . . . Former Senator Greer of Rhode Island probably will get the appointment to France or Italy.

You can't bake a cake with a BLOW-TORCH!

If a cake isn't evenly baked, it becomes lopsided . . . or crusty in one part, and heavy in another. A fluffy, tender cake can be baked only by an even, steady heat on the top, bottom and sides. You couldn't get that with a blow-torch!

One secret of preparing good food and of roasting coffee is even application of heat.

Drink Hills Bros. Coffee and you will know the importance of even roasting. For Hills Bros. Coffee is roasted a little at a time . . . as the blend flows evenly, continuously through the roasters. This process—Controlled Roasting—is exclusive to Hills Bros. The heat is kept at a steady temperature, and every berry is "done" exactly alike. Each pound has the same matchless flavor—uniform goodness no other coffee has.

The ordinary method of roasting coffee is in large batches. In spite of close attention to this operation, it is impossible to roast each batch the same. As a result, disappointing variations in flavor often occur. There's a thrill and constant satisfaction in Hills Bros. Coffee! Every cup has the same fragrant aroma and appetizing goodness. Order some today, by name, and look for the Arab trade-mark on the can.
