mother died when I 2 years old. I got six sisters and a stepmother. We got some father—not same mother.

STOMACH PAINS—“I have stomach pains since I 3 years old. I not mad at my father but I mad at capitalists. They got education.”

“I don't smoke, drink because it makes my stomach on fire.” “Are you mad at anybody now?”

“No, except I mad at capitalists all time—I not mad at fallers or at anybody here.”

“I don't believe in God.” “Zangara described the actual shooting and said Mrs. W. F. Cross of Miami and not Armour, an earlier witness, knocked his arm and diverted his aim as he tried to shoot Mr. Roosevelt.”

“I tried to shoot Mr. Roosevelt before, when he talk, but lots of people in my road, and I can't do it.”

“I feel I have right to kill him. I feel that many years.” “I know they give me electric chair but I don't care—I'm right.”

SORRY F. D. UNKILLED—“I don't make no difference who I kill—I kill Mr. Hoover or Mussolini if I see them first.”

“Are you sorry you shot the other people?” “Yes, I am not sorry.” “I sorry I no shoot Roosevelt.” “Do you want to tell the court anything?”

“Yes, I kill Mr. Roosevelt if he comes in this room now,” Zangara said in response to a question from State Attorney M. Vernon Hawthorne.

“Would you kill Mr. Hoover?” “No, he's not president now.” “I'd kill any king or president.”

“I know they give me electric chair but I don't care—I'm right.” “Yes, I kill Mr. Roosevelt if he comes in this room now,” Zangara said in response to a question by Twyman.

“But I want to kill Roosevelt,” he repeated. Zangara said he had planned to kill former President Hoover but had changed his mind when he learned here that Roosevelt was coming to Miami.

“No, no, I am not crazy,” he said in response to a question by Twyman. Court recessed until 3 p. m.

Before the hearing started Judge Thompson threatened to cite for contempt of court any spectator carrying a gun in the court room or in the corridors.

A brief, authoritative description of the emergency banking bill follows: 1. Validation of all emergency decrees and proclamations of the president.

2. Reenactment of sections of the old wartime trading with the enemy act, to prevent hoarding and to control gold reserves in the United States.

3. Grant to the federal government of power to control all national banks; state banks, through state banking commissioners; provision for prompt reorganization of non-liquid banks, and closure of non-liquid banks for the present.

4. Authorization for the reserve bank to issue federal reserve bank notes, through reserve banks, against obligations of the United States, and no corporation or partnership dealing in securities should be permitted to take deposits even under full banking regulation.

5. Boards of directors of commercial banks should be limited by statute so as to be small enough to enable members to be familiar with bank affairs and in a position to discharge their responsibilities.

6. Arrangements were made in both senate and house to do his bidding, once formal organization was completed.

“Trongs were gathered in the galleries to hear the presidential message read, while he remained at work at his White House desk.”

“Our first task is to reopen all sound banks,” he declared, and went at once into his immediate emergency plans—“I ask of the congress the immediate enactment of legislation giving to the executive branch of the government control over banks for the protection of depositors; authority forthwith to open such banks as have already been ascertained to be in sound condition and other such banks as rapidly as possible; and authority to reorganize and reopen such banks as may be found to require reorganization to put them on a sound basis.”

“I ask amendments to the federal reserve act to provide for such additional currency, adequately secured, as it may become necessary to issue to meet all demands for currency and at the same time to achieve this end without increasing the unsecured indebtedness of the government of the United States.”

“I can not too strongly urge upon the congress the clear necessity for immediate action.” The president called those recommendations “an essential preliminary to subsequent legislation directed against speculation with the funds of depositors.”

He revealed also, that he soon will request congress to enact two other measures “of immediate urgency”—proposals believed in democratic ranks at the capital to be power to reduce government costs, including veteran funds; and to provide $500,000,000 or so for public projects to spur employment.

Senator Glass in the senate and Representative Byrns in the house sponsored the banking bill, aiming if possible to get it to the White House by tonight. This, it was believed, would enable bank reopenings tomorrow.

Among the crowds who filled the congressional galleries was the wife of the president. In the house, too, numerous friends of Representative Rainey of Illinois gathered to watch his formal election as speaker to succeed Vice President Garner.

Continuation Of—Banking Bill

ed it to Chairman Fletcher of the banking committee to introduce. As Fletcher moved to refer the bill to the committee, Senator Norbeck (R., S. D.), who has been chairman under the republican regime, said the would not object to the action, but that he deemed rushing a banking bill through “unwise.”

“Will you meet tomorrow?” he asked Fletcher. “We're going to meet today and right now,” Fletcher replied, adding, “We ought to be through in about an hour.”

As part of the program, Mr. Roosevelt wanted, and was told he would get, over gold; he was assured, too, that congress would give him the sweeping powers he wants to reduce expenditures to equal income. Payments on the public debt would be the next step.

Likewise, Federal Reserve member banks were instructed to report the names of all persons who had withdrawn gold since February 1 by March 15. This was designated to loosen boards and revive talk about publishing the names of hoarders.

All of these things are contemplated to meet the immediate emergency. When the emergency period has passed, the emergency program will be set aside for a long-time plan the president is preparing.

This plan will be submitted to the congress within two or three weeks. Beyond indications that it will call for a more strict federal supervision of banks, possibly leave closed some financial institutions that are unsound, and perhaps establish a system of guaranteeing deposits, there has been no intimation as to what it will contain.

Most of the president's friends say simply that he will call for a complete reorganization of the banking system that would prevent recurrences of the present difficulties.

Eventually officials apparently hope bankers will take advantage of the rights they have under existing law to expand or contract the currency as conditions demand. Around $3,000,000,000 in new money could be issued under existing law, even without Mr. Roosevelt's latest proposal, but the bankers had not been exercising their privileges with enough speed. Consequently, this latest step was proposed.

Continuation Of—Roosevelt's Plans laboring through the complexities of a mammoth banking revision bill.

Washington, March 9 (AP)—In a few crisp words, President Franklin D. Roosevelt urged the specially convened congress today to empower him immediately to open “sound banks, to reorganize other banks and to provide currency expansion.”

Arrangements were speed in both senate and house to do his bidding, once formal organization was completed.

“Trongs were gathered in the galleries to hear the presidential message read, while he remained at work at his White House desk.”

“Our first task is to reopen all sound banks,” he declared, and went at once into his immediate emergency plans—“I ask of the congress the immediate enactment of legislation giving to the executive branch of the government control over banks for the protection of depositors; authority forthwith to open such banks as have already been ascertained to be in sound condition and other such banks as rapidly as possible; and authority to reorganize and reopen such banks as may be found to require reorganization to put them on a sound basis.”

“I ask amendments to the federal reserve act to provide for such additional currency, adequately secured, as it may become necessary to issue to meet all demands for currency and at the same time to achieve this end without increasing the unsecured indebtedness of the government of the United States.”

“I can not too strongly urge upon the congress the clear necessity for immediate action.” The president called those recommendations “an essential preliminary to subsequent legislation directed against speculation with the funds of depositors.”

He revealed also, that he soon will request congress to enact two other measures “of immediate urgency”—proposals believed in democratic ranks at the capital to be power to reduce government costs, including veteran funds; and to provide $500,000,000 or so for public projects to spur employment.

GERMANY REGRETS YANKEE ASSAULTS

Washington, March 9 (AP)—The state department disclosed today that protests have been made to the German government through Ambassador Sackett against reported indignities and violent revolting American citizens.

In reply the German government expressed its regret and gave assurance that every measure would be taken to prevent similar occurrences.

The cases were understood to have arisen from disorders in connection with the recent election in which the national socialist or nazi party, headed by Adolf Hitler, was given commanding power.

Four incidents were reported involving American citizens. The individuals named were Henry H. Sattler, Edwin P. Dakin, Nathaniel B. Wolf and Max Schussler. Their places of origin or residence in the United States were not given in the dispatch from the Berlin embassy and were not immediately available at the state department.

Two distinct protests were made after the second German foreign office said the matter had been called to the personal attention of the chancellor and each member of his cabinet.

British Navy Budget Made Public Today

London, March 9 (AP)—British navy budget estimated, published today, provides for an expenditure of $3,370,000 pounds sterling, an increase of 3,993,700 pounds over last year.

The admiralty has explained this year's estimates have been restricted due to the financial situation. The budget provides for construction of four cruisers, eight destroyers, one fleet oiler, command craft, three submarines, three sloops and one auxiliary craft.

The four new cruisers are final replacements under the London treaty.

“I ask amendments to the federal reserve act to provide for such additional currency, adequately secured, as it may become necessary to issue to meet all demands for currency and at the same time to achieve this end without increasing the unsecured indebtedness of the government of the United States.”

Washington, March 9 (AP)—The text of President Roosevelt's message to the special session of congress follows: To the senate and house of representatives:

On March 3, banking operations in the United States ceased. To review at this time the causes of this failure of our banking system is unnecessary. Suffice it to say that the government had been compelled to step in for the protection of depositors and the business of the nation.

Our first task is to reopen all sound banks. This is an essential preliminary to subsequent legislation directed against speculation with the funds of depositors and other violations of positions of trust.

In order that the first objective—the opening of banks for the resumption of business—may be accomplished, I ask of the congress the immediate enactment of legislation giving to the executive branch of the government control over banks for the protection of depositors; authority forthwith to open such banks as have already been ascertained to be in sound condition and other such banks as rapidly as possible; and authority to reorganize and reopen such banks as may be found to require reorganization to put them on a sound basis.

I ask amendments to the federal reserve act to provide for such additional currency, adequately secured, as it may become necessary to issue to meet all demands for currency and at the same time to achieve this end without increasing the unsecured indebtedness of the government of the United States.
