A committee from the Woodburn Woman's club presented a petition that this property be made into a park some months ago and no action was taken by the council at that time but favorable action was expected and the sudden change of front was somewhat of a surprise.

It was the opinion of the council that the matter should be voted upon by the people and that there was a question as to whether the council had the power to grant the petition. The movement was sponsored by the Woman's club with Mrs. A. E. Austin as chairman of the committee and was endorsed by the chamber of commerce, the Board of Garden club, Rural club, American Legion and Auxiliary, Eastern Star, P.E.O., W.C.T.U. and Woman's Relief Corps.

The picnic, although sponsored by the Farmers' Union and grangers, was open to the general public and many residents of Sheridan availed themselves of the opportunity to meet with friends and hear speakers of state-wide note.

B. M. LeFevre of Newberg presided in a pleasing manner and after singing by the crowd of America, introduced Ebon Ray of Willamina, who spoke on "Why Belong to the Farmers' Union?" Mr. Ray gave an interesting account of the growth of the Union from its infancy in America and stressed the benefits from it. The next speaker was John M. Davenport of Newberg, master of the Yamhill county grange, who spoke on "Why Belong to the Granges?"

Mr. LeFevre then introduced Senator W. E. Burke of Newberg, who after a stirring brief speech, presented the main speaker of the day, B. P. Irvine, editor of the Portland Journal. Mr. Irvine in a masterful manner gave one of the finest speeches ever listened to by a critical audience in Sheridan, and although it flowed with Fourth of July patriotism, thrilled with its inspiration during this time of depression. Mr. Irvine made the farm, the home, and the nation, joined in fellowship his theme. He said fellowship was the biggest word in the King's language and a smile the most precious thing in the world. He felt so deeply he said, because the union and grangers were his own people, since he was brought up on a farm.

A picnic dinner was the fashion for the large crowd of picnickers and free coffee was dispensed as the gift of Sheridan Red and White store. A stand was run on the grounds, where soft drinks and refreshments might be obtained. Everything tended to carry out Mr. Irvine's exhortation of fellowship.

The afternoon was given over to group visiting and the ideal day kept people in the park till a late hour.

The spirit of the firecrackers was heard all day, stirred only during Mr. Irvine's speech, and the children enjoyed themselves in the freedom given them in the fine, clear park.
