Frank Doolittle's Master Service Station

—This is the Fifth of a Series of "Know Salem Merchants"—

The Southwest corner of Commercial and Center streets was leased in March 1929 by Frank Doolittle who has since done much to build one of Salem's really Super Service Stations.

Mr. Doolittle built the building and installed the equipment that makes up this huge establishment, the largest Union Oil products dealer in the state of Oregon

"Frank" as Mr. Doolittle is known to his thousands of friends is a harness maker by trade, learning the business by working for his father who was an old time harness maker. It took Frank seven years to learn the trade and seven minutes to find that he couldn't use it.

The result was that he decided to get in on the business of supplying harness to the "gasoline horse" in the way of Goodyear tires. He sells and distributes 8500 tires a year in Marion and Polk counties besides caring for the vulcanizing work of many Salem dealers. The vulcanizing department is equipped with Goodyear factory machines capable of handling the largest bus tires and operated by Hobart Smith, experienced Goodyear factory vulcanizer.

"I am for the N. R. A. 100%—I think it is a fine thing" said Mr. Doolittle. "We have shortened the hours of our employees which virtually means an increase in wages of 20%, we have hired four additional men to make up the shortage, this gives us a total of 14 employees—and while prices have not increased sufficient to make up the difference we feel that everybody giving and doing his share will help us all in the long run.

We have not tried to get rich quick but rather have contented ourselves with a small profit conducting our business to furnish employment to the greatest number of men by giving a good service at reasonable prices—to this we attribute our success in Salem."
