First American Roads

A bulletin issued by the Carnegie Institution of Washington on recent explorations in the jungle covered regions of Yucatan, formerly the site of Mayan civilization, reveals that in addition to cities, temples, and pyramids erected, the long forgotten Mayas constructed an elaborate system of paved highways to connect the cities and inland lakes they bordered. These roadbeds, though hidden by jungle, still exist in fair condition. One of these connected Yoxana and Cobe, a distance of 62.5 miles.

In width these roads are from 30 to 34 feet; in height to which they are built up above the surface terrain, they vary from 2 to 8 feet. The ancient engineers began by digging down to hardpan, which is near the surface and erecting retaining walls on either side to the desired height, of large, roughly faced limestone, set in cement mortar. Into the space between the walls, a layer of heavy boulders were carefully laid, and the space between filled with smaller stones, hammered into position.

On top of this layer other courses followed, each of successively smaller boulders and stones, carefully placed, until the road had been brought to the required height, whereupon a layer of finely broken rock was added. After this was hammered or rolled into a hard level surface, a final coat of dazzling white mortar cement made of lime and sifted white clay was applied.

The modern Indian name for the ancient stone roads of Yucatan is sacbe, which means literally "white road" and they must have been literally great white ways comparable to our own. In the Caba region there are 16 of these raised roads terminating in the ruins about the chain of lakes. Why they were built remains a mystery, for the Mayas had no beasts of burden, nor wheeled vehicles. Evidently they were built for travellers afoot and palanquin and burden bearers. They testify to the advanced civilization of the Mayas for savage man builds no roads—the hunter's trail answers all purposes. The highway construction methods of the Mayas of the 4th century were not unlike our own—save that machinery was unknown.

Inflationists Defiant

The speech of Secretary Wallace, said to represent the administration views on inflation, is regarded by inflationists as a defiance of their program—to which a majority of both houses of congress are committed. The president's plan is to await the outcome of the recovery program already underway before proceeding further in inflation—which he holds in reserve as a last resort.

The gist of Wallace's pronouncement is that inflation has gone far enough for the time being and that the country must find its immediate salvation in increased payrolls and decreased farm production and an expansion of foreign markets. Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, leader of the inflation bloc declares:

Some of us last winter thought a 60 cent dollar would do the trick. We've got it but it is not enough. A 50 cent dollar may serve the purpose. We may have to go to 40 cents and should not hesitate to do so. The inflation fight will continue. You may depend on that.

Roosevelt seeks a controlled inflation, but if the inflation plan for a 40 cent dollar doesn't work, there will be nothing to prevent a 20 cent dollar, then a 10 cent dollar, then a one cent dollar as in Germany and other countries where inflation ran riot only to end in complete collapse. It is to prevent such a debacle that the president is striving.

What the inflationists are really after seems to be greenbacks—printing press money—with an initial issue of $3 billions for public works, then probably $2 billions more for soldiers' bonus.

Found—A Leader

In response to the Medford Mail Tribune's call for a real leader to guide Oregon out of the slough of despond and into the vale of prosperity, C. W. Cady of Route 6, Salem, has modestly volunteered for the job, announcing that he "intends to run for governor this coming election, on the democratic ticket." He states:

I am of the people, for the people, and must be elected by the people. I am not running for the honor of the office. I am connected in no way with any political group. If I am elected to the office I will go with no obligation nor promise to fulfill. But I do promise the people a safe, sane and sensible administration.

Mr. Cady further promises that within 48 hours after taking the office, the "cost of operating the state of Oregon will be reduced 50 percent or more. Every man in the state who wants work will be given an opportunity at a living wage." Abandoned farms will be "rehabilitated." And in running for office, he will spend no money, nor will he fill the state offices with "Old Guards."

Mr. Cady is not specific in details—miracle men don't have to be. It's all done by waving a magic wand and the votes of the people. But we are glad to see Marion county come to bat again with a real leader (he says so himself) to save the state—Portland has monopolized the salvation business long enough.

The moral—if there is one—is that every emergency develops its man of the hour, and that as long as we have self-starters, we shall not lack saviors and as long as we have the Oregon system, we shall not lack self-starters. And Mr. Cady has the advantage of being first in the whiz-banging field of political tin Lizzies.

plied for admission to the new exchange.
 Several New Jersey aites have been offered.
 Installation of 700 telephones is being arranged between New York and New Jersey. Ticker service, according to an announcement yesterday, can be ready in two weeks.
 Many brokers are preparing to move their "main offices" to New Jersey. The New Jersey "main offices," according to advance information, will likely be in private residences and other small spaces.

 Brokers said they could not bear the heavy taxes. Some have memberships on the exchange which cost up to $495,000. They operate from 5 to 100 special leased wires. Office help ranges from 10 to 100 and more persons.
 They pointed out that 5 per cent of their earnings, taken before these overhead charges are made, would eliminate any chance of profit. Also they claimed the increased cost of transferring shares—which will bring the total to 12 cents on some stocks with state and federal taxes—would drive the public from trading.

VAN DER LUBBE CRIPPLES CAUSE OF PROSECUTION

Lelzigs, Germany, Sept. 21 (AP)—Martinus Van der Lubbe, one of five men put on trial before the supreme court today charged with burning the reichstag building, crippled the prosecution strategy by denying from the witness stand that he was a communist.

It is the prosecution case that communists burned the building, and Van der Lubbe's co-defendants are known communists.
 "Are you a communist?" presiding Judge Buenger asked the 24 year old Dutch stonemason.
 There was a moment of silence, Van der Lubbe stared at the floor and then mumbled:
 "No."
 "What are you then?" asked the judge.

There was another silence, Van der Lubbe muttered inaudibly. The judge, apparently satisfied, proceeded.
 Nazis claim they have a confession from Van der Lubbe. The defense of the other men is that he is not a communist and that he had been making pro-Nazi statements for two years. They allege Nazis burned the building to discredit communism and seize power.

The defendants were already in court when the red robed judges entered and the audience rose and gave a riller salute.
 Van der Lubbe had led the procession of prisoners. He was handcuffed between a policeman and a prison guard, and paid not the slightest attention to his surroundings.
 Next came Ernst Torgler, 40, for years whip of the communist party in the reichstag. Pale, he stared straight ahead and bit his lips.
 The came the three Bulgarians—Georg Dimitroff, 51, a writer; Waa-sil Taneff, 36, a shoemaker, and Blagol Popoff, 31, a student, all like Torgler known communists and abandoned to their fate by their government.

Presiding judge read the charges—high treason and arson against Van der Lubbe and treasonable activities against the others. The defendants except two Bulgarians acknowledged they understood the charge, which then was read in Bulgarian.

Notes—Prof. Moley's magazine will advocate a nationalist policy on the debts and other international matters. It may frequently conflict with the views of State Secretary Hull. However, there will be no direct attacks on Hull under present plans.

News Behind The News

(Copyright, 1933, by Paul Mallon)

Washington, Sept. 21—Some extra fancy inside wire pulling is being done by Wall Street to squelch the senate stock market investigation.

Several of the biggest men in the street are annoyed about what will come out if the inquiry resumes, as scheduled, in October. It seems that Prosecutor Pecora has struck pay dirt in every sense of the word.

The Wall Streeters argue that further persecution of them will cause business disturbances. They think it will interfere with the recovery program. They may be right about that.

At least they have convinced four conservative administration officials close to Mr. Roosevelt that they are right.

These four are now supposed to be exerting pressure on the President to call his dogs off.

The one thing essential to such a maneuver is secrecy. Unfortunately, a certain member of the senate investigating committee has heard about the matter. He knows the names of the parties involved. He has the constitutional immunity necessary for calling names out in public and is threatening to do so.

One thing deters him, Chairman Fletcher of the investigating committee has summoned a meeting for October 3. This meeting is supposed to determine the policy of the committee as to the future of the inquiry.
 If the committee decides to pursue the inquiry, nothing will be said. If it calls a halt, fur will fly.

Progress—The mere fact that the committee is going to talk policy shows how far the Wall Streeters have been able to get.
 When the inquiry recessed several months ago, it announced it would continue October 3. Pecora went to New York to dig up evidence and has spent the summer at it.
 Now that he has the evidence, the committee is going to meet to determine whether it should proceed.

The truth seems to be that no one except Mr. Roosevelt can kill the inquiry and he will not. Pulling and pressure sometimes work in reverse on him.

Further public frying of Wall Streeters may not accomplish any constructive purpose, but it can hardly be stopped half way. The investigators have the bear by the tail and cannot let go now. Mr. Roosevelt probably will tell the committee.

Thousands of sufferers from poorly functioning kidneys are winning freedom from Getting Up Night, Leg Pains, Nervousness, Stiffness, Rheumatic Pains, Burning, Smarting, Itching Acidity, and loss of Vitality, caused by poor Kidney and Bladder functions with a Doctor's prescription called Cystex (sulfate), but it can hardly be stopped half way. The investigators have the bear by the tail and cannot let go now. Mr. Roosevelt probably will tell the committee.

Kill Kidney Acid New Way

Thousands of sufferers from poorly functioning kidneys are winning freedom from Getting Up Night, Leg Pains, Nervousness, Stiffness, Rheumatic Pains, Burning, Smarting, Itching Acidity, and loss of Vitality, caused by poor Kidney and Bladder functions with a Doctor's prescription called Cystex (sulfate), but it can hardly be stopped half way. tee that privately if not publicly.

Evidence—Advance hints about Mr. Pecora's new evidence indicates the last half of the show will be better than the first half, even if J. P. Morgan and the Midget are missing. The star may be a former bank board chairman. It seems that he developed some novel financing methods through a family corporation he organized for financial drainage purposes. Since his retirement he has been receiving a stupendous annuity from the bank, much larger than Samuel Insull received when he sought solitude in Greece.
 Also Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, probably will be recalled. He thought the committee was through with him, but it may want more details about operations of the Exchange.
 Mr. Morgan may not be disturbed but his associates in Wall Street's largest exchange will be needed. The question of going into the Morgan books is still hanging fire.
 Then there is a new list of politicians who were favored with bargain stocks below market prices. It will be a bigger and better list than any of those which have gone before.

At least this is the advance notice which has reached those near the top.
 Market—Some committee members have further big things in mind. They want to make public the books of specialists. That will cause a shudder down the spine of every market man.
 A specialist's book is the sanctum sanctorum of the stock market. In it are all the secrets about specific stocks.
 Publication of them would leave Wall Streeters nothing private except their own souls and the committee may take that angle up later.

Fame—Senator Borah used to be the biggest American name to Europeans. Anything he said or did was more important than the actions of the President. His speeches were reported abroad more fully than they were here. However, times have changed.
 Recently a news agency received the following cablegram from its European headquarters:
 "Ray off Borah interviews. Name carries no weight any more."
 Probably it is the Roosevelt influence.

Debts—Debts are no longer regarded as an important subject either here or abroad. The inner attitude is that it is futile to talk about them now.

The coming talks with the British representative will be just going through the motions of diplomatic negotiations, with pessimism on both sides. Other nations will hang back to see what the British do.
 This administration will drop the matter rather than take the 5 to 15 per cent payments which the British are planning to offer.

Notes—Prof. Moley's magazine will advocate a nationalist policy on the debts and other international matters. It may frequently conflict with the views of State Secretary Hull. However, there will be no direct attacks on Hull under present plans.

DEPRECIATION OF DOLLAR TO BALANCE TRADE

Washington, Sept. 21 (AP)—The depreciation of the American dollar is expected by the NRA to offset tariff increases which otherwise would be imposed to bring imports into fair competition with American goods.

Oscar B. Ryder, head of the newly established imports division of NRA, said today that the American importer can get only 62 cents worth for his dollar abroad, and that the value thus lost balances against any likelihood of increased imports.

Apparently in anticipation of inevitable increases in price of goods manufactured under NRA codes, the recovery act itself provided machinery to prevent foreign products taking advantage of that situation in the American market.

Gardner L. Harding, secretary of the national foreign trade council, in Washington to confer with NRA officials on matters of United States imports and exports, said his organization had formed an importers' committee which divided into two groups dealing with consumers' and producers' goods.

The committee proposes to submit a blanket code for importers and will work out details before October 1, Harding said.

The committee is recommending including in all codes of import provisions similar to those of the lumber code by which the code authority may determine minimum prices for domestic sale, and may petition the president for restriction of imports if their competition is endangering operation of the code.

nationals endangered by interior difficulties should move toward the warships.
 But the navy's sudden orders speeding off destroyers from the Guantanamo base in Cuba, to various troubled spots were interpreted by observers as indicating a serious situation on the island. Some Americans were known to be moving within the gun range of their country's warships.
 Consular advices meanwhile reported communist demonstrations, mob violence and spreading strikes east of Havana. Hull disclosed also that in the interior, some Americans were virtually prisoners.
 The shifted navy cordon put two vessels off Antilla, two more off Santiago and an equal number near the Isle of Pines. Only two destroyers remained in Guantanamo bay where eight were a few days ago.

TUGBOAT ANNIE

FILM HELD OVER

Public response to the record-breaking picture "Tugboat Annie" featuring Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery, is such that Carl Porter, manager of the Elmore theater, is holding the film over the entire week including Saturday.

This gives the picture a solid week's booking in Salem, with the first showing the midnight matinee last Saturday night at which time the largest crowd since the night show was inaugurated, greeting its initial appearance.

Because of the popularity of the film, Manager Porter has been forced to rearrange his schedule for the next few days and "No Marriage Ties", with Richard Dix, slated for Friday and Saturday will be presented at a future date.

Mt. Angel—Tuesday morning an enrollment of 119 pupils was revealed at Mt. Angel academy. The normal and college division will begin next Monday, and a large number of students have already registered. Rev. Father Vincent is registrar at the academy.

PLAN ATHLETIC PROGRAM FOR Y

Members of the physical education committee of the Y. M. C. A. met Thursday noon at a downtown restaurant for the purpose of outlining plans for the year's activities. Representatives of the board of directors included C. A. Page, chairman, George Hug, Dr. Wood and Paul Acton. Department representatives were O. J. Hull, business men's gym class; Lloyd Greig, volleyball; Don Hendrie, wrestling; Dr. Beechler, handball; C. Page, Jr., track and Dwight Adams, physical director.

The usual activities of the fall and winter season, including men's gymnasium classes, women and girl's gymnasium and swimming classes will get under way around October 1.

The association is prepared, through additions to its staff, to provide recreation and exercise for men, women and children.
 A schedule of classes, the hours and days for the different activities is being printed and will be available for all interested late this week.
