RETAIL DISPLAY OF DRINK BANNED

Portland, Dec. 21 (AP)—The state liquor control commission met here Wednesday and one of its first moves was to ban the window display or other advertising of liquor by retail dealers. Until the establishment of state stores, expected to be about a month from now, the commission has indicated a policy of leniency in the matter of retail sale of hard liquor by private concerns.

A. J. Tourtelotte, accountant, who was sent to British Columbia to make a survey of liquor stores for the Oregon commission, told the state board that "the board controlling the liquor business in British Columbia is one of the most efficient organizations I ever encountered."

There are 70 provincial liquor stores in operation in British Columbia, with a staff of 3000 employees and executive offices, he said. A merchandise inventory of $1,250,000 worth of liquor is now on hand. The inventory turnover is about 10 to 14 times a year.

Tourtelotte said one large store in Vancouver, B. C., made 28,000 transactions in November. The larger stores have about 10 employees each to handle records, retail sales and warehousing activities.

Robert Switz, listed as having lived formerly in New York and New Jersey, might possibly have been merely tools in the hands of the real leaders of the espionage syndicate who escaped abroad.

Police explained that the young Americans were taken into custody after they had been found in possession of large sums of money and with their baggage packed, leading investigators to believe they were prepared for flight after having spirited the most important military secrets across the frontier.

The Switz and other foreigners probably would be deported, officials said unless serious evidence was uncovered against them.

from Oregon's capital is so frequent as to be almost continuous, I doubt if his present departure from the scene of his official duties is news. Rather it would be news if he were ever on the job for the people of Oregon, who expected so much from him when they elected him governor or of their great state.

"However, the record discloses that up to now he has failed to attend 38 meetings of the board of control and that he has neglected 13 times to even call a meeting of the board when the law specifically directs meetings to be held.

"In the last six months he has called only 10 meetings of the board of control. Three different times he has been absent for periods of six weeks or more at a time.

"His astounding record of absenteeism and neglect of his public duties on the board of control is similar, if not identical, with his record on the land board, banking board, reclamation commission and other public bodies of which by law he is ex-officio chairman.

"The result is that the public work is neglected, unnecessary expenses incurred and citizens of the state who call at the capitol to confer about the public business are disappointed when they find only subordinates on the job.

"The state administration is disorganized and drifting for lack of a competent and industrious executive.

"There are no conferences between elected board members, nor is there deliberation between them prior to decisions necessary for the efficient and economical continuance of our state government.

"There are glaring lapses of administration. The present condition of the irreducible school fund is one."

Continuation of—Old Age Pensions

coming year will give each man and woman qualified for the pension approximately $5 a month. This will include a man and wife in the same family, each to receive $5 a month if found qualified under the law.

Judge McMahan, in dismissing mandamus proceedings today, declared that mandamus was not the proper form of procedure. Under the new law, injunction proceedings against the county court and have all the legal questions involved ironed out.

"Mandamus will lie only to compel an officer to do something if he has refused to do so," said the court. "This is an action to compel the county court to levy a tax. The question with which this court can have no concern. Mandamus here should lie to determine whether or not the court should or should not issue a pension in this particular case. It couldn't include the question of a levy. Where the county court gets the money to pay the pension is its own particular business, not the business of this court. It may be the county court has the money available, this court has no way of knowing whether it has or not under the record.

"The proper procedure would be either to bring a suit for a declaratory judgment, or since a levy has been made, through injunction proceedings brought by a taxpayer.

"Mandamus proceedings would not decide a number of legal questions involved in this matter. For instance, the constitutionality of the whole old age pension act is involved and this cannot be determined in the manner the question was brought before this court. The supreme court of Colorado, in a declaratory judgment case, has ruled that a commission named as is in Oregon law, including the county judge and two commissioners to administer the old age pension law, is invalid. The court holds that the commission is delegated with legislative powers and that such delegation of powers is unconstitutional. There are other legal questions, all of which can be solved by injunction proceedings or a declaratory judgment suit but cannot be touched in the instant proceedings. The case is dismissed."

It is likely the next move of the county court will be to set up machinery for receiving pension applications. With each application being up a half an hour to fill out and literally hundreds of applications to be filled out, court members state that help will be required with for now taking care of the physical end of the work on applications.

Elks Charity Show Makes Customary Hit With Excellent Program

The Elks charity show, which has become, because of unvarying excellence, an outstanding annual event in Salem, played its first performances to a crowded house at the capitol theater last night.

The program was a first-class affair, with a variety of acts, including a quartet, a duo, a solo, and a group. The quartet, directed by Dick Robertson and trained down to a delicate standard of excellence, "The Old Road" and "Big Bad Wolf" were the first offerings of the chorus.

The novelty song and dance by the juveniles, Pauline Zoe Chambers and Buddy Sewell, pupils of Barbara Barnes, won the plaudits of the big house as they have often done before. Clarence Wenger, Don Allison and Boots Grant, who are responsible for a considerable share of the show's perfection, played a piano trio number. A couple more selections by the chorus and the first comedy feature was introduced. Jesse Savage and Everett Rutherford in a blackface act that featured funny hits at local characters.

An effective scenic arrangement was accomplished in the next appearance of the orchestra behind a filmy curtain. Dick Barton, basso, stepped out for the next number with a solo that justified his reputation as one of Salem's best male soloists.

The crowd didn't wait for the finish of the skating act to give a roaring hand of approval to Francis Lane and George Campbell. Truthfully it can be said the act was the best of the kind ever seen in Salem, and after the lead had responded to success, Dr. Armin Berger, master of ceremonies, informed the audience that the pair is to leave in a few days for Chicago to go on the professional circuit.

Likewise the big audience was reluctant to release the Haywire orchestra. Dr. S. F. Scott, Dr. A. D. Woodmansee, Frank Zinn and Rufe White who kept the customers in such an uproar that they damaged the furniture. Dick Robertson, Max Alford and Dick Barton, as the Elks trio, offered two sentimental selections.

It's not so easy to put comedy into an adagio act, but this was cleverly done by Clara Hurley and Elmer Lowell. The Alpha Phi Alpha trio was engulfed in a wave of enthusiastic approval as they finished each of two numbers, "Love is the Sweetest Thing" and "By a Waterfall."

The show closed with "Lucky Bones Specialty" by the entire company.

Depression Loss to Canada Estimated

Montreal (AP)—It is estimated by one source here that the economic loss to Canada due to the depression totals $11,000,000 in terms of money, or about $5,000,000 in terms of purchasing power after allowance has been made for changes in the cost of living. The estimate is made on the assumption that the country might have continued its progress after 1928 at a rate equal to the natural increase in population, about 1 1/2 percent annually under ordinary conditions.

Pajamas Get Place In New Dictionary

Paris (AP)—The 40 immortals of the French academy, after serious and lengthy consideration, have decided to incorporate in their new and forthcoming dictionary the words "pajamas" and "quatre-saisons," or "four seasons."

This is considered a step forward, and each revision of the national dictionary evidences a tendency toward modernism which is definitely frowned upon by many and cheered by others.

ELKS TOY TIME COMES SUNDAY

All needy children of Salem who come to the Elks temple, State and Church streets, next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock will find Santa Claus awaiting them with heaps of Christmas things, says an announcement by Robert Cole, chairman of the Christmas cheer committee of the Elks lodge. Other members of the committee are Harry Mohr and Lou Thomas.

Included in the toys to be distributed by the Elks will be the collection on which the members of the Salem fire department have been working for many weeks. Every day, without cessation, the firemen have been piecing the toys together, painting them and stacking the finished product away, ready for Christmas.

Today the Elks were busy packing candy which also will be handed out Sunday afternoon. A large quantity of clothing has been assembled, the garments being of many kinds and for all appropriate purposes, and this will be placed where most needed.

The Elks Christmas this year is to be limited to the children, says the committee. "We will welcome all boys and girls who would have no Christmas if we did not provide it for them," Cole said. "Those who are otherwise provided for need not come."

Flood Danger Over

at Albany and Eugene the Willamette was shrinking slowly back into its banks.

To further dissipate flood threats the weather man predicted some relief from the downpour during the coming 24 hours, forecasting occasional showers in place of the steady rains that have been experienced during the past week. Experienced weather observers here agreed that the only prospect of serious damage lies in continued heavy rains.

Reports of water damage in the valley continued today to be of a minor nature. All primary and principal highways were open to traffic, except the old Salem-Silverton road which was still under water at the Pudding river bridge. Several local, or district roads were reported under water, however, but the extent of damage to them cannot be ascertained until the water recedes.

This morning a delegation of farmers from the Fargo district north of Salem, where a wide expanse of flat land and the local roads through it are inundated in surface water, appeared before the county court with a preliminary request for some action to drain the area as a C.W.P. project. The proposition no definite plans but suggested that construction of better drainage ditches along the county roads would probably take care of the excess water.

All state highways through the valley were reported open by the state highway department, although traffic was required to navigate the temporary guide stakes in a few places. No further word had been received from Tillamook, where yesterday the coast highway was reported closed by high water.

Transportation, communication and power facilities out of Salem had been restored practically to normal today. Southern Pacific hours yesterday by damage to the steel bridge in Portland and subsequent merging of the tracks near Clackamas, were again running close to schedule with the exception of the southbound morning train, No. 7, which was delayed because of waiting for connections with trains from the north and east in getting out of Portland.

The first section of this train, due here at 9:57 a. m., did not arrive until 12:15 and the second section pulled in about 1 o'clock this afternoon. The southbound Cascade limited was reported due here on schedule, however.

All Southern Pacific trains out of Portland were being routed over the river across the S. P. & S. bridge at St. Johns until repairs to the steel bridge near the Union depot, caused when a steamer crashed into it, can be repaired.

The Oregon Electric reported no trouble along its line and motor buses were operating on schedule in all directions. Officials of PEPCO said no additional damage had been suffered to power lines and telephone lines in the vicinity of Salem were all operating normally except for a few farmer lines.
