OPTOMETRISTS HEAR M'BURNIE TALK EYE CARE

Six Salem optometrists had returned from Portland today where they attended yesterday a meeting of the Oregon Optometric association, which was featured by an address from Dr. Thomas McBurnie of Brooklyn, N. Y., president of the American association. The address, the Salem group said, was one of the most helpful they have ever heard on the problems of their profession.

Salem persons who attended were Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Glutsch, Dr. and Mrs. William Thompson, Dr. and Mrs. L. R. Burdette, Dr. C. B. O'Neill, Dr. Ruth Daughtery, and Dr. Henry Morris. Dr. Burdette is secretary of the state association.

Observance of simple rules for the care of the eyes, frequent checks by optometrists for detection and correction of weaknesses, and the lessening of fatigue by shifting the eyes from concentration or reading or similar work will help in preserving the eyesight, Dr. McBurnie said.

He said that 100 years ago probably one person out of 100,000 wore glasses, while now the ratio is one out of four. The cause he attributed not to weaker eyes but to the extremely greater use that is being made of eyes. The rapid rate of living he gave also as a reason.

"Twenty-five or 50 years ago," he said, "if you rode up the Columbia highway, which, incidentally is one of the finest scenic routes I have ever seen, you would have taken several days. Now you ride up in a half day and your eyes get five times as much work as formerly.

"We are working now to bring about proper lighting conditions in the homes to help lessen the strain.

"Many persons, when they become physically tired, lie down and rest. But when their eyes become tired, they ignore the strain. It is the same thing as the case of the delivery boy who took a long walk after going home tired from his work. One of the best ways to rest the eyes is to shift them to distant objects every ten minutes, if reading or concentrating. Tiny eye muscles soon become fatigued and draw disastrously on the nerve system."

Dr. Glutsch of Salem was one of a committee that met Dr. McBurnie at the Portland union depot. He is on a tour of the principal cities of the nation. His first speaking appearance was at the Portland Breakfast club, then before the Portland Kiwanis club at noon, in the afternoon for a KGW radio talk and last night before more than 150 Oregon and Washington optometrists at the Benson hotel where a banquet was served.

JOHNSON ASKS FOR CRITICISM OF NRA REGIME

Washington, Feb. 21 (UP)—General Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, today invited the nation to "a field day of criticism" of NRA next Tuesday.

"We will give heed and apprehension to the words of any man who can show that the effect of an NRA code or any provision thereof has been harmful or that it might be improved or that it ought not to exist at all," Johnson said in explaining that the "field day" was a prelude to code revision conferences starting March 5.

He said that the NRA always has welcomed criticism and that it has operated in a "gold fish bowl." Whatever mistakes have crept into the blue eagle codes, he promised, will be corrected in this same gold fish bowl, "under the full vision of the entire American people."

This public program of code correction, he said, is without precedent.

"First," he said, "no great governmental administration ever voluntarily exposed itself to a general public review; and

"Second, neither here nor in any other country has it ever been possible to hold a responsible and representative industrial and economic congress—not merely of commentators—but of the controlling units of practically the whole of industry and commerce in the United States acting in partnership with, and under the ultimate control of the government itself."

Johnson expressed the triple duty of NRA thus:

"It is to see that industry does not horn-swaggle labor; that labor does not bully-rag industry; that neither, separately, nor both, in concert, shall exploit the consuming public."

"Thus we sit always in the white heat of controversy," he continued. "Industry accuses labor, labor accuses industry and consumers accuse both."

representative and also adequate.

Entering the store the visitor will find a special display case with a bottle of every variety of liquor carried in stock. Each will bear a code number and the price. The purchaser makes his selection and then proceeds to the permit clerk who issues a permit. Next he or she goes to the order clerk and makes known the code number. The order clerk will check the permit and then the customer calls at the cashier's cage. A dispensing clerk will wrap the package and the purchase is completed.

Permits will not be available until the store opens Friday morning, according to J. J. Elliott, supervisor for this district. Elliott is devoting much of his time in superintending the opening of the store here and making final arrangements for the establishment of liquor agencies in the immediate vicinity. These will be open in about a week after the Salem store, he states, and will be located at Woodburn, Silverton, Dallas and Independence.

In the meantime, acting upon advice of the state liquor control commission, druggists are cleaning up their stocks and will be required to submit a complete inventory of all liquor on hand as of February 23 to the commission. After Friday the druggists may sell liquor upon prescription only.

dence is all in I'll probably be found guilty'."

He says he will make a definite decision within a week.

Right now Carle is chiefly concerned with the matter of his prospective opposition for the republican nomination, and the incidental considerated of a campaign war chest. His scouts are reporting to him that Stadelman shows no signs of running, but concerning the intentions of Earl Snell, speaker of the house, their efforts have not been crowned with much success.

From up Arlington way there issues a lot of silence as regards what Mr. Speaker proposes to do. But in the activity of certain republican strategists in combing other fields there is evidence that Snell has not responded with much enthusiasm to their solicitation that he ask the chief executive's job. Of course, it is entirely possible that Snell may decide to attend his own business and let others worry over the affairs of state.

To give Abrams some further concern friends of Irl McSherry, ex-service man and former commander of the Legion post here, are whispering that the former secretary to Governor Norblad has also been flirting with the enticing idea of benig secretary of state. Whether he is seriously entertaining such an ambition or just jockeying for a favorable position when the plums are passed out has not developed.

Further consideration of some consequence to Abrams or any other republican who may seek the nomination is what the democrats propose to do. If they bring out some popular young war veteran from upstate, either Eastern Oregon or the Willamette valley, and tie him to the tail of General Charles H. Martin's gubernatorial kite the going is apt to be tough for the republican nominee in November.

If the people look upon Martin's candidacy with strong favor they are apt to be equally inclined to back his administration up with a sympathetic third member of the board of control in the person of a secretary of state.

Abram's prospective candidacy has unusual and interestnig angles, particularly his relation with Governor Meier and the present administration. From the first day Meier took office Abrams was a target of the executive's housecleaning activities, and around him centered many a merry battle on the board of control. With Hoss and State Treasurer Kay defending his scalp Abrams retained his job as secretary of the board until Kay died and Rufus Holman took his place.

The Meier-Holman alliance made short work of Abrams and upon Holman's motion elected Elwig to displace him.

As a member of the legislature, however, Abrams has worked closely with the governor and as chairman of the house committee on unemployment sponsored and fought for the administration programs during the regular and special sessions of 1933.

have for my own protection."

Several weeks ago Brown came to Washington and gave Farley a sheaf of letters which he said inadvertently had been placed in his private files when he left the department.

Postoffice employes had testified before the committee earlier that official files in the department had been burned a few days before March 4, last year.

Brown again denied charges of illegality in mail contract awards in his administration. Black attempted to show that all airlines receiving contracts from Brown were controlled by four major holding companies.

"I can't be drawn into an argument of that kind," Brown said, and named several companies he said were "independent mail operators."

Black then turned again to Brown's stock holdings in the International Mercantile Marine corporation, and asked if Brown knew that I. M. M. had an interest in the Philadelphia Mail Steamship company.

Brown said he knew that I. M. M. had stock in the steamship company.

Brown testified that in the closing days of the Hoover administration, an ocean mail operation handled by the Southgate-Nelson company was divided so that the Philadelphia mail line could obtain a contract between Philadelphia and English channel points.

He said he knew nothing of an alleged last-minute attempt in the senate to fillibuster a resolution protesting award of the contract.

W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, was interested in the Philadelphia transaction, Brown explained. He said he promised Atterbury he would give the matter "personal consideration."

"Mr. Atterbury was anxious that the contract be consummated," Brown added, "before the postoffice department got under the influence of those who he thought wouldn't want to do anything for Philadelphia."

in favor of the Johnson bill removing the jurisdiction of federal courts from purely state questions.

He recalled his own experience in New York where a proposal for the state public service commission to reduce telephone rates required seven years of litigation in the federal courts.

No message will be sent to congress on the proposal, but if there is any doubt there of the president's attitude, assurance was given that it can be quickly determined.

The president advanced his regular Friday cabinet meeting to today in order, it was stated, to permit cabinet members to have a weekend off.

Mr. Roosevelt has been giving close attention to the foreign situation, but there was no indication of immediate action.

The federal alcohol control administration has asked distillers and wholesalers to forward data on their costs.

It was emphasized that the government has no control over retail prices, but has power to deal with producers and wholesale distributors.

Recently negotiations have been carried on by the administration with larger American distillers who own liquor stocks in Canada. It is understood these distillers are being asked to sell freely to their smaller competitors after they have imported this liquor.

A 30 day relaxation of import restrictions on rye and bourbon and all liquor designed for rye and bourbon blends in this country expired February 15.

Now the FACA has opened the door to American-type rye and bourbon whiskies again, hoping for importation of a large quantity of the liquors. The new order is effective until April 1.

When the relaxation period commenced, the government had information that around 20,000,000 gallons of rye and bourbon were in Canada, but the importations during the period approximated only 560,000 gallons.

At the present time, liquor produced in Cuba may be sent into this country without regard to quota limitations providing it is consulated before March 1.

25-Year Jewel Is Presented Collins

Gervais—The past grands of Gervais I.O.O.F. No. 121 entertained the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs Saturday evening with a program and oyster feed. During the program, A. L. Collins was presented a 25-year jewel, honoring him for his continuous and faithful membership in the I.O.O.F. since 1907. Music was played by the Brooks orchestra. Following the program the guests played cards until refreshments were served. S. A. Harris was in charge in the kitchen.

Silverton — Word has been received that Sam Stadell, now in Switzerland, is leaving for America the first of March and expects to be in Silverton about the middle of the month.

FLOOD CONTROL MEETING HERE ON SATURDAY

County engineers of the counties touching on the Willamette river will meet here Saturday to compile flood control data for submission to another meeting of the flood control organization at Albany next Tuesday. The meeting here will be held in the office of State Engineer Stricklin at the state capitol.

In the meantime anyone who has reports of flood damage to make is asked to file a report of same with the state engineer in his county. Any Marion county persons with knowledge of such damage or of flood hazards from either the Willamette or its tributaries, is asked to write in such a report to County Engineer Swart. In Polk county it is asked that such reports be sent to the county engineer there. It is further asked that such letters be in the hands of the various county engineers before Saturday so they will all be available in compiling data on that date.

These plans grew out of a meeting at Albany yesterday where six counties in the flood control area were represented. Clackamas, Washington and Multnomah were not represented at yesterday's meeting, but they will be urged to have representatives at Albany next Tuesday.

At that meeting, with the reports from all of the county engineers on hand, it is hoped to be able to whip into shape a CWA project for a survey of the entire valley as to flood control, irrigation and drainage, the survey to eventually lead up to a gigantic flood control plan to cover all of the Willamette river territory and that of its tributaries.

State Engineer Stricklin spoke at the Albany meeting yesterday and expressed the opinion that a project could be secured under the CWA for the survey if the necessary data are made available.

County Commissioner Smith, chairman for this county of the flood control group, urges that anyone with knowledge of flood damage in the county write to the county engineer at once so as to have as complete a report as possible available on this county.

SCHOOL DANCE ISSUE BOBS UP

Members of the Salem school board will have up for consideration during their meeting next Tuesday night the question of dancing in the public schools. The matter will be brought to their attention through a resolution passed last Sunday night during the evening services of the Temple Baptist church which reads: "Resolved, that the members of this church are opposed to dancing in the public schools and especially during school hours also, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the clerk of the school board to be read in their next regular session."

There has been no dancing during school hours since he has been principal of Salem high, Fred Wolf stated Wednesday, although one was held in the gymnasium last Friday afternoon after class work had been completed. The practice of holding an occasional dance at night has been in effect during the past few years. Principal Wolf states these affairs are always attended by members of the faculty and no rowdyism is tolerated.

While not wishing to dictate to the board as to its policy, Wolf says he believes properly supervised dances held in the high school are much to be preferred to those held on the outskirts of the city where regulation is a thing not often encountered.

CODE COMMITTEE SUED FOR $40,000

Portland, Feb. 21 (UP)—Suit for $40,000 damages was filed against members of the Oregon petroleum committee by the Association of Commercial Truck owners in circuit court here today.

The suit asks that the committee be enjoined from interfering with the business of the truck owners in the petroleum industry in addition to asking the damages.

The Truck Owners' association has been engaged in the petroleum business for its members and alleges that the committee has made it difficult for the association to obtain petroleum products.

Members of the committee, a code organization, listed as defendants are: Marc D. Leh, Charles S. Myer, Harry W. Brown, R. H. Cook, R. H. Hogg, Cy H. Pruner, R. D. Gilbert, R. B. Harris, George Tichenor, C. E. Heyns, W. M. Wilt, D. G. Fisher, George N. Gage, and W. L. Muncy.

Brundidges Farm On Large Scale

Hopemere — Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Brundidge are operating the 400 acre farm of Grace Savage Robbins and an acreage on the Murdock place. Mrs. Brundidge runs the tractor while Brundidge follows and seeds the ground to wheat. They will soon be ready to seed other fields to flax. Mrs. Brundidge's mother, Mrs. Murdick, has spent the winter in New York with another daughter and is returning to Oregon Thursday to take charge of her greenhouse on the home place.

West Salem — Rev. Kimball K. Clark preached at Oak Grove Sunday morning. After the services he and Mrs. Clark were dinner guests at the Gardner-Blaffis home.
