OLD LANDMARK IS ALMOST HIDDEN

Hanford, Cal. (AP)—Buried from view of passerby in the barren hills of the Devil's Den district near here, one of California's oldest landmarks is succumbing to the elements.

County Tax Collector E. W. Houston said the basin below the rock once was the only source of water for many years over the vast inland country.

Jesus' priests, on long treks from the coast into the barren inland, used the pool as an oasis on their journeys. The water no longer is available, a series of dry years having left the basin dry.
