

BECK ASSAILS NEW DEAL AT BAR MEETING

Milwaukee, Aug. 30 (AP)—The nation's leading lawyers were appealed to today to defend the constitution against "serious undermining" brought about by centralization of power in the federal government.

A number of committee reports received at the 57th annual convention of the American Bar association criticized a tendency to usurp powers constitutionally delegated to the states.

"The problem which should concern every American lawyer is whether the tendency towards an unprecedented centralization of power shall continue unchecked," said a report of the committee on American citizenship headed by Rep. James M. Beck of Pennsylvania.

Beck, one of the most outspoken critics against the Roosevelt New Deal, was more caustic in his criticisms in an interview.

"The N.R.A. is absolutely unconstitutional," he said. "It is a flagrant interference with the individual liberties guaranteed by the American constitution. I have frequently so declared before the House of Representatives.

"It has immensely retarded recovery, destroyed confidence and initiative and scared business."

Against the criticism stood out a finding by the committee on commerce, headed by Rush C. Baker, that "whether the national recovery legislation is sustained or declared unconstitutional, this committee is of the opinion that government regulation of business will continue on an increasing scale."

Dean Roscoe Pound of the Harvard law school replied to attacks on the New Deal with a statement that the tendency to give wider powers to the executive branch of the government is "a natural adjustment to our economically unified industrial society."

BIG OVERWATER SPAN HURRIED

San Francisco (AP)—Eleven and one-half million dollars were spent in construction of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge—world's longest overwater span—during its first year of construction, Earl Lee Kelly, state director of Public Works, reported today.

The work has progressed speedily and the $77,200,000 structure may be opened to traffic six months ahead of schedule, or in July, 1936, rather than in January, 1937, Kelly said.

Kelly, in a report to Gov. Frank F. Merriam, reported that for the first time in three years, there is a demand for scrap iron in California as a result of bridge operations. Thirty thousand tons of reinforcing steel alone were used during the first year's construction.

Other materials to be used in the bridge construction include: 152,000 tons of structural steel, 18,500 tons of cable wire, or 70,000 miles of piano wire, the diameter of a lead pencil, 1,500,000 cubic yards of concrete, containing 1,200,000 barrels of cement, 30,000,000 board feet of timber, 200,000 gallons of paint.

Construction of the waterfront began July 9, 1933. Bridgefront strike conditions caused a temporary suspension of work, but all work has been resumed and is proceeding at a faster pace than had been expected.

INDIAN SENDS A MESSAGE NORTH

Houston, Tex. (AP)—Henry Horton, born in a wigwam in the Oklahoma Indian Territory the year after Texas joined the Union, at 88 has asked aid in getting his claim for an Indian allotment established.

As Indian as the head on an old-fashioned penny, Horton, half Cherokee, told this story: "My grandfather was Jeff Moss, a full-blooded Cherokee. My grandmother also was a Cherokee.

"Their daughter, Minnie, married my father, a white trader named Jeff Anthony Horton, and I was born May 17, 1846.

"My mother died when I was a baby, and my father joined another trader named J. W. Flangle. We went to about where Paris, Tex., now is. When I was five years old my father died."

From that time on, Horton said, he drifted here and there, working in the store for $3 per week and board, in a planing mill, as a pump repair man on a railroad, and in a sawmill.

A friend wrote to the Department of Interior, Division of Indian Claims. An answer received said the "citizenship rolls of the Cherokee tribe are closed."

"Horton's name does not appear on the final rolls of the Cherokee nation," the form letter from John Collier, commissioner, said, "and only those persons who are enrolled can receive tribal benefits."

WEDDING NIGHT IS SPENT IN HOOSGOW

Pocahontas, Ill., Aug. 30 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bleckmore of Pocahontas, Ill., today are honeymooning, surfeited with bliss by a pump repair man on a railroad, and in a sawmill.

Two hours after they were married, their speeding car was stopped by a surly officer who believed in enforcing the law—romance or no romance.

Bleckmore was charged with speeding; plead guilty; was unable to pay a $10 fine. He spent the night in jail—alone.

Then came the dawn after his "wedding night." The court relented, allowed him to pay $5 on account, and depart with his bride—after promising to pay the balance later.

EAGLE'S WIFE TELLS HER TALE FOR MAGAZINE

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—Anne Morrow Lindbergh dips her pen in thrills and color to tell in September's National Geographic magazine how it feels to go globe-trotting with the world's foremost aviator.

Making her debut as author of vivid travelogue, Mrs. Lindbergh tells about the 1933 flight around the North Atlantic, on which she handled the wireless key.

She makes her travels live again; the country: outposts of Canada; the land: where giants conquered the land; Leningrad, "a beautiful city gone a trifle shoddy"; Moscow, "a amazing combination of old and new."

Her longest dissertation on her own clothes could hardly be called a fashion note — it was over the Greenland ice cap.

"I was wearing, in addition to woolen underwear, one thin wool shirt, one thick wool shirt, one wool sweater, thick riding trousers, several pairs of wool stockings, fur-lined kamiks and helmet, and over everything a hooded white blanket Park designed for us by Dr. Stefansson. I was quite warm except for my feet, which I sat on, and my hands, on which I put another pair of mittens."

The radio key simply signs through her story.

"Being assured by radio of a safe anchorage while one is still over icy wastes is a miracle to which there is no parallel. The comfort of it is rather like walking through a dark room, always keeping one's eyes on the light beyond in the hall."

And for pure exultation, there's this passage on the hopoff from the beamed African coast: "We're off? No—spank—spank—spank—but almost — I held my breath. We're off. No more spanks. Yes we're off—we're rising. The engine smoothed off into a long sigh, like a person breathing easily, almost like someone singing, ecstatically. We turned from the lights of the city. The plane seemed exultant then, even arrogant. We did it—we did it!"

BAD MEN GET OUT OF INSANE WARD

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 30 (AP)—Seven men, three of them convicted of murder, overpowered guards and escaped yesterday from the criminally insane ward of the state hospital here.

State prison officials and hospital attaché reported none of the fugitives had been recaptured several hours after the break. None of the guards was injured in the escape. The seven men took their keys and calmly walked out of the main gate.

Included in the group was Ed Beaver, convicted of slaying an aged neighbor in an argument over a watermelon, saved from the electric chair on a plea of insanity.

Judge Allows Man To Get His Breath
