

RELIEF WILL BE ISSUE FOR NEW CONGRESS

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—New deal unemployment relief cost more than $1,000,000,000 in the past 11 months of 1934. The exact figure was $1,245,309,551. Since Harry L. Hopkins became relief administrator on May 23, 1933, he has spent $1,569,728,039 to aid the destitute.

President Roosevelt and congress must decide this winter how the relief problem shall be handled. Donald Riechberg, chief new deal coordinator, reported to Mr. Roosevelt last summer that relief needs would reach a February peak of upwards of 20,000,000 men, women and children.

The administration finds one of the more difficult of recovery problems and the more conservative of republican and democratic statesmen are alarmed by relief expenditures. Banks and big business have abandoned their Hoover administration position that no federal funds should be spent for human relief.

Former President Hoover was the champion of the so-called anti-dole groups. Powerful business interests now are exerting all their influence in favor of a dole and against the aid system known as work relief. Under a dole system the jobless and their dependents are supplied with goods and some cash to maintain life. Work relief creates jobs upon which the unemployed are put to work in return for which they received wages.

Work relief is considerably more extensive than a dole. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to recommend to congress this winter a large scale work relief program. Congress will support the administration plan. Big business and banks will be defeated in their effort to substitute a dole for the work relief system unless there is some fundamental change in the situation by mid-winter.

Mr. Roosevelt's only concession to the plea for reduced relief expenditures was a statement in October that federal expenditures could be curtailed as business revival provided increased employment.

The overflow of unemployment after all available federally made jobs have been filled may be turned back to states and municipalities. The rise from 60 per cent to 75 per cent in proportion of federal to state contributions for relief disturbs new dealers. They are having some success in compelling lagging states to meet more of their own burden.

ATTEMPT FAILS RESCUE CHURCH

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 21 (AP)—Efforts of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to save the Church of Christ in Oak, negro, have failed, but they have encouraged the congregation to "keep on praying." Pastor A. E. Shadd said yesterday.

"We believe our prayers will be answered, and our church will be saved," said the head of the heavily mortgaged church. "I myself do not draw a salary, but live on offerings which amount to less than $15 a month."

When Mrs. Roosevelt was at Warm Springs recently, the church of 90 members wrote her, telling her of the $11,000 mortgage and the threat of foreclosure. "God revealed that you would help us if we would appeal to you," they said.

She forwarded the letter to the Home Owners Loan corporation, from which came a reply, signed by L. B. Hayes, assistant secretary, saying: "Mrs. Roosevelt has requested us to reply to your letter of Nov. 24 with reference to a loan," adding that under the HOLC law money could not be lent on church property.
