ITALIAN THREAT EYED CLOSELY

Washington, July 13 (AP)—Secretary Hull's pronouncement that the Kellogg-Briand peace treaty is binding upon all nations signatory to it was regarded today as a new indication with concern at threatened hostilities between Italy and Ethiopia.

Those two nations are among the 63 countries which signed the pact of Paris. In a statement to the press last night, Hull re-affirmed this government's belief in that treaty and said:

"It is an agreement and solemn obligation that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts among nations of whatever nature or of whatever origin shall never be sought except by peaceful means." Hull did not mention Italy and Ethiopia by name, but did say in effect that this government looked to nations to live up to their obligations under the treaty.

Hull's remarks were regarded here as of special significance in view of his recent conferences with Ambassadors of Italy, Great Britain and France. On July 4 Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia sent a note to this government which was interpreted as a request that the United States invoke the Kellogg-Briand pact. In reply, Hull suggested that the league of nations was a competent agency to achieve a peaceful solution. Then last night he told reporters:

"The United States and the other nations are interested in the maintenance of the (Kellogg-Briand) pact and the sanctity of the international commitments assumed thereby for the promotion and the maintenance of peace among the nations of the world."

expenditure of this portion of the fund. Pending receipt of the official regulations, which are not expected here before Monday, R. H. Baldoek, state highway engineer, declined to comment on the Washington dispatch. He admitted, however, that such a regulation regarding county roads would materially upset the calculations of the highway commission in allocating work relief funds to Oregon projects.

Baldoek and Henry P. Cabell, chairman of the highway commission, will leave Sunday to attend a conference of the state road officials of western states with representatives of the federal bureau of public roads regarding the work relief specifications.

Washington, July 13 (AP)—Employment of 350,000 persons on relief rolls in construction of farm-to-market roads and elimination of grade crossings was brought a step nearer today by presidential approval of rules and regulations under which $400,000,000 will be spent.

Construction will be supervised by the department of agriculture. Labor was graded into three classes, unskilled, intermediate and skilled. The program calls for a per man-year expenditure of $1,400. At the peak of construction 720,000 persons will be employed, officials estimated.

The regulations follow: 1—All state programs must originate with state highway departments. The district engineer of the bureau of public roads must give approval to the state administrator of the works progress administration and state director of the national emergency council.

2—Concurrence by state officials is to be submitted to the bureau of public roads in Washington for final approval. 3—Exceptions: If the secretary of agriculture finds any state does not have a satisfactory highway department he is authorized to cooperate with legally constituted officials of cities, counties or other political subdivisions of the state.

This exception would apply in Georgia. The state highway board in Georgia was notified on June 23, that its engineering inspection on road projects was inadequate. An unpaid sum of approximately $723,600.00 is involved in road programs for this year. The rules and regulations signed by the president cover $200,000,000 for road building and $200,000,000 for grade crossing elimination. At least 25 per cent of each state's share of both funds must be applied to rural secondary or feeder roads which are not on either the state or federal aid systems.

COLOR APPLIED TO TELEVISION
Washington (AP)—Although television still is something of the future, two Washington scientists have developed the first device for applying color to transmitted moving pictures.

Dr. H. B. Maris and Robert H. Worrall, of the Naval Research Laboratory, co-operated on the development, which calls for the use of brass and quartz.

Worrall has been issued a patent for the apparatus. Success of the invention, the scientists said, depends on the outcome of efforts to perfect methods of television.

The device has been so developed that a tube termed the Karbus cell passes a moving beam of light—in any color desired—to a television screen.

It was explained that light passed through quartz, will change to any color determined by the thickness of the quartz plate. The inventors would add a quartz plate, mounted on a four-inch piece of brass, to existing television circuits, so as to receive and screen motion pictures in color.

It was pointed out that the invention still was in "the laboratory stage," depending on "money, time and brains" to perfect it.

have been committed by a member of the conspiracy. Judge Cushman told the jury he would receive a verdict up to 5 p.m., today, but if one were reached after that it should be sealed and delivered by the foreman in court at 10 a.m., Tuesday.

Frank Barber, the 13th—alternate juror, was excused after Cushman inquired if any of the ten men and two women trial jurors felt indisposed.

Soon after the jurors retired, Mrs. Waley was taken from the courtroom by United States Marshal A. J. Chitty, who returned her to the Tacoma city jail.

At 11:17 a knock came from inside the jury room and a bailiff poked his head in—that was said could not be overheard. Stephen J. O'Brien, defense attorney, spoke privately to the bailiff and then commented, "I better call Johnny Dore," chief defense counsel who had just let the federal building.

There was a flurry of excitement over the rumor that a verdict had been reached but Dore, who returned within a few minutes, told newspapermen the jury merely wanted an explanation of some matter from Judge Cushman.

The jury was informed it must make its request in writing and court attaches and attorneys said that as soon as that had been done, the jury would return to the courtroom to learn whether their request could be granted.
