

UNCLE DAVID PENS LETTER TO PRINCESS

London, April 21 (P)—"Uncle David" sent a note of apology today to soften the disappointment of little Princess Elizabeth, second in succession to the British throne, who had expected the wearer of the crown of Britain to attend her 10th birthday party.

The note said "Uncle David," otherwise known as King Edward VIII, was prevented by state affairs from attending his niece's party.

The princess drew some consolation from the opening of hundreds of presents from all parts of the world. Due to a family rule she may not keep any gifts sent by persons unknown to the royal family.

Another member of British royalty who could not attend was the Princess Royal, the Viscountess Lascelles. A doctor's bulletin from Leeds said that Princess Mary was suffering from measles, and the complaint was "taking its normal course."

Other guests who did attend, however, and whom the princess served with generous slices of a birthday cake baked by the king's own chef, included her parents, the Duke and Duchess of York, and her uncles and aunts, the dukes and duchesses of Kent and Gloucester.

Exceedingly personal were the invitations too—written by the little princess herself on mauve-edged stationery stamped with the initial "E" and a royal crown.

The cake she cut herself from her place of honor at the head of the table.

This formal affair was at the Royal Lodge at Windsor, and bells of Windsor castle, St. George's chapel and Windsor parish church were rung in her honor.

Later little Princess Elizabeth entertained a group more nearly her own age at a tea in her own tiny model home, a gift from the Welsh people on her sixth birthday. Elizabeth herself made the tea for this party and buttered the toast.

Special arrangements had to be made by the court postoffice to handle the rush of telegrams, letters, parcels and cards from all parts of the world.

Many of the gifts were stamps, for the princess has followed her grandfather, the late King George V, as a philatelist.

DIRK DE JONGE GIVEN PERMIT TO TAKE APPEAL

Dirk DeJonge, Portland communist, was allowed by the state supreme court today to take an appeal to the United States supreme court in an effort to set aside his sentence of seven years in the state penitentiary for criminal syndicalism.

Chief Justice J. U. Campbell signed the order, sought by DeJonge's attorneys, Irvin Goodman and G. J. Solomon, Portland. The state's high court upheld DeJonge's conviction November 26, 1935.

Indictments against George Weitzel, Ben Melchor, Conrad Trout and John Sauer, charging them with a crime against nature in Multnomah county, were affirmed by the court in an opinion by Justice Bean. Weitzel and Sauer appealed from an order by Circuit Judge Louis P. Hewitt denying a motion to dismiss the indictments.

The defendants contended the charges should be dismissed because their cases were not tried at the next term of court after the indictments were found by the grand jury.

"Lack of time on the part of the circuit court to hear the case against the defendants, and to dispose of unfinished business, is good cause for not dismissing the indictment against the defendants," the court said. "And it is not requisite that any additional or different reason be given."

Other opinions:
Jacob Lueber versus G. E. Reynolds, Frank McGillis and J. A. McGill, appellants. Appeal from Multnomah county from judgment in favor of plaintiff to collect $2000 on promissory note. Opinion by Justice Bell. Judge Jacob Kessler affirmed. Held, that navigability of Blue Lake, eight miles from Portland, is limited and that title to the bed of the lake—especially that uncovered by drainage—is vested in the defendants subject to the superior right of the public to use the waters for transportation and commerce.

Leidators, appellants, versus E. L. Benedict, Mrs. Ethel Wade Benedict and P. L. McClintock, appellees from Multnomah county. Action to collect on a collateral note. Opinion by Justice Rand. Judge Archie G. Walker reversed. Held, that a court may not award a judgment against any one defendant in the same case for a different amount when all are equally liable.

Dorothy Jean Dermody, by Selma M. Dermody, her guardian, versus Alonzo M. Fanning, appellant. Appeal from Multnomah county. Action for damages for personal injury in automobile accident. Opinion by Justice Kelly. Judge John P. Winter affirmed.

J. A. Graf versus A. A. Fletcher, appellant. Appeal from Marion county. Petition for rehearing denied in opinion by Justice Bailey.

Michelle Ciapanna, by Lena Ciapanna, his guardian, plaintiff and appellant, versus Lincoln Fire Insurance Co. of New York, Appraiser from Multnomah county. Suit to collect fire insurance. Opinion by Justice Rossman. Judge Robert Tucker reversed and case remanded.

Petitions for rehearing were denied in Buckard versus Thielmann and in re Buckard Water Co. Lloyd E. Weaver, Portland, was permanently admitted to the bar.

IMMUNIZATION EFFORTS DOUBLED

Immunization work in the state is already more than double that last year which brought first national recognition to Oregon, according to a tabulation completed yesterday by Dr. Laban A. Steeves, grand chief de gage of the 40 et 8 society of the American Legion. Figures to date are 11,483 as compared with 5380 last year. Work will continue until the end of the fiscal year which will be at the grand promenade in connection with the state convention of the American Legion in Roseburg in August.

particularly in reference to the skin. As a result of this activity, strong pressure will be exerted at the national convention in Cleveland, Ohio, in the fall to retain possession of the large loving cup awarded annually to the state making the best showing in the child welfare program of the 40 et 8 society. The work is carried on either by the society or in cooperation with American Legion physicians and county health authorities and applies to children who otherwise would not receive the protection offered.

APPLICATIONS FOR PENSIONS SCANNED

With 500 old age pension applicants who have to be qualified under the new old age pension law with new applications and these qualifications in before May 1 to allow them to participate under the increased payments with federal and state age, the relief committee was expected to go over 100 of these applications today. This will swell the list of those qualified by the county committee to around 200 leaving an additional 300 to be qualified to take up the slack only on those who were already on the pension lists.

There will be an additional 200 more new applicants coming in under the new provisions and it is a question whether there will be time to qualify these on top of the other 500 who had already been getting pensions from the county. If the total of the first 500 are not qualified under the wire county court members express the belief they may have to pay the pensions of those not qualifying from the county poor fund, so every effort will be made to get the new applications in. But after the county relief committee passes these applications they must be passed by the state relief committee which may turn back some of the applications on technical defects. It was stated today by County Commissioner Roy Nelson that no stone will be left unturned to get in all of the 700 applications this month if possible. If not it is possible the other 200 may have to wait over until the following month for their first pension checks.

MARTIN TO OUTLINE VALLEY PROJECTS

Governor Martin will outline a new plan for advancement of the Willamette valley project at a meeting here Friday, he said today. He would not reveal details of his recommendations in advance of the session.

The project will embrace irrigation and flood control in the valley. "I wish to have considered certain plans and recommendations for the benefit of the project," the governor said. "I will present an outline of these plans and suggestions at the time of the meeting. It is my hope there may be developed some kind of a unit organization or co-ordination, whichever may be deemed desirable, to carry out the project."

Jury Question Goes Before Court Today

The state supreme court today will hear arguments attacking the constitutional amendment which provides for conviction for any crime, with the exception of first degree murder, by 10 members of a jury of 12. Irregular procedure in amending the constitution was alleged.

The point was brought up in the appeal from the conviction of Joseph J. Osbourne for second degree murder of Simon Miah at Portland December 11, 1934. Osbourne was convicted by 10 jurors for second degree murder on an indictment charging first degree.
