The GOP Ticket

Republicans view the results of the Cleveland convention with satisfaction. The ticket named was probably the best that could be selected among the candidacies for there was a paucity of talent among the offerings. The platform is the usual compromise designed to appease contending factions and catch votes. The result was never in doubt for the well organized Landon machine had full control of the situation from the start, and skillfully manipulated to create harmony by nominations by acclamation.

In Alfred M. Landon they have a capable standard bearer, a sturdy self made American with common sense and practical ability—despite his mediocrity and lack of brilliance. He has little magnetism or imaginative appeal and his record is bare of creative statesmanship, but few presidents have had these qualities. He has been well dubbed "the Kansas Coolidge," and would be "sane and safe" along conventional lines.

Frank Knox, a successful publisher, is probably the abler man of the two, though never having served in public office, his record proves his independence, forthrightness, and innate conservatism, despite his bolting the party, as Landon did, with the first Roosevelt. Both candidates are personally likable and vigorous, mentally and physically.

Both probably have their eyes fixed on 1940 for the chances of defeating Roosevelt are not very bright and grow dimmer with returning prosperity. Conditions are improving too fast to make successful a campaign based on negation, dissatisfaction and discontent sufficient in strength to defeat a candidate with the personal appeal and record of the president. Meanwhile they will have control of the party machinery.

The republican platform offers little but criticism. It has borrowed largely from the New Deal and offers nebulous generalities for its continuance in modified form. It is progressive to win the west, and conservative enough to hold the east. It is designed, like all platforms to catch votes.

The greatest handicap Landon faces, is the fact that he was hand-picked by William Randolph Hearst for the job and supported by Wall Street, its financiers, speculators and industrialists, though because of his liberal leanings, may prove a disappointment in office, though his record as governor does not indicate it.

The New GOP Boss

John Hamilton, who managed the Landon campaign and made the nominating speech, has been properly rewarded for his zeal in collecting delegates by election as chairman of the republican national committee and as such will run the election campaign.

Mr. Hamilton is far from being as liberal as his candidate, in fact he is a hard-boiled conservative, a political protege of Dave Mullane, long the Kansas national committeeman and a 'ten minute egg" stand-patter. Hamilton was long fought by William Allen White as an opponent of progressivism.

Only a year ago, Hamilton was attacking New Deal measures in vigorous fashion, measures which, like the AAA, NLA and social security, Landon had openly supported. He toured the state denouncing the AAA and pitying the farmer who "had no course but to place his neck under the heel of our agricultural bureaucracy." He organized the "grass-roots" convention, which he called "a repudiation of the policies of President Roosevelt and nothing else," and "against the New Deal from Triple A to Zed."

However Hamilton has sung a different tune since he became Landon's manager as his nomination speech shows. He has had to harmonize himself with his candidate—a course all republicans will follow.

The War Debts

The fact that the European nations are again defaulting on their annual installments on war debts, caused the republicans at their convention to jibe at the present administration for failing to collect them. However they pointed out no way to collect them.

Default on the war debts started when Hoover declared a moritorium on German reparation payments, which the allies had depended upon to liquidate their debts. Nothing was done by Mr. Hoover to collect them, for nothing could be done unless an attempt was made to collect them by war.

The high tariff wall erected under the Smoot-Hawley bill, effectually stopped the payment of these debts in the only way they could be paid, by exports to the United States. It was the way they were contracted, by imports from the United States to Europe. No money was received by Europe, only goods manufactured in the United States which the loans liquidated. The money for payrolls and materials all remained in this country.

When we demanded gold, instead of goods, we made repayment impossible because the debtors did not have the gold, most of it had been siphoned into the United States by previous payments. If some way can be found to compromise the debts by scaling them down and accepting imports in payments or by international stabilization of currency, the debts might be eventually paid, but the republicans suggested no such way.

PROGRAM BENEFIT FOR RURAL YOUTH

An extension program for the special benefit of rural youth past the 4-H club and Smith-Hughes ages will be tried this fall in Tillamook, Union and two other Oregon counties still to be selected, according to announcement by F. L. Ballard, vice-director of extension, upon his return from Washington, D. C., recently. Mr. Ballard is a member of a special committee of the Land Grant College association which is working out a national program of extension work in this field.

It is apparent, said Mr. Ballard, this extension projects with this group will be developed from a combination of certain features of all existing projects aimed toward the needs and capacities of the age group roughly considered as from 16 to 25. Rather than create any new administrative units for specialized personnel, extension specialists in the established subject matter fields will probably be encouraged to adapt part of their presentations for this special group. Recreation and social features are expected to hold an important part in the new program.

"CHILDREN'S DAY"

Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it. Prov. 22:6

One day in my boyhood I was riding with a boy a little older, when we were joined by a young man whose appearance and language showed him to be a hard character. When the new-comer had passed on, my companion said: "That is a preacher's boy. I have always noticed that they are the worst boys around." Since he spoke from the garnered wisdom of fifteen years that was an impressive remark.

Shortly after I attended the funeral of this preacher's boy. He was accidentally shot while showing some admiring girls how he had settled a gambling quarrel, by drawing his hair trigger revolver.

But who was this man's father? He was a dissipated man who reformed periodically, and had joined and been baptized by three distinct denominations. At his last reformation unwise friends had licensed him to preach, and elected him to a county office. Soon after his election he lapsed again, and after a time left the county. In southern Oregon he disguised himself as an Indian and tried to "rustle" some horses. The ranchers caught him and treated him to lynch fare.

After he was dead they found he was a white man, and letters in his pocket revealed his identity.

It is said, "One swallow does not make a summer". But one "preacher's boy," with that background, was sufficient to prove the truth of that slanderous saying about preachers' sons. But investigation refutes the slander. There are more preachers' sons listed in "Who's Who" in proportion to their ratio in the population than from any other occupation. The reason is not far to seek. The moral and Christian influence of the average parsonage home is more valuable than bank accounts and gold mines as a preparation for life. In a meeting recently I heard about twenty people tell of their religious life, and every one had a definite Christian home training. I have heard men say: "I had to go to Sunday school when I was a kid, and I got enough of it." That was where they were driven to the school, while parents stayed away. I have yet to hear anyone say: "My parents always took me to church and Sunday school and I got sick of it." Goldsmith describes the pastor in "The Deserted Village" (really his own father) and thereby tells the secret of good home training. He says he "allured to brighter worlds, and led the way."

News Behind The News

By Paul Mallon

Cleveland, June 13—One of the smartest things the Landon managers did was to keep books meticulously on their campaign contributions. They kept themselves ready for a congressional investigation at any time. Perhaps that is why no investigation has been started.

PAUL MALLON

It will come out eventually that they have accepted no campaign contribution of more than $2500. This is something new in campaign financing.

But the most interesting part of the story will never come out. That is the one about the checks they have sent back to big contributors. Some very wealthy persons, whose names are known to everyone, have had their well intended offerings returned with a polite note to the effect that their money was not needed.

What the notes meant was their money was not wanted.

Note—The Landon bookkeepers say privately that 75 per cent of the contributions were in donations of less than $100 each. The nature of the campaign required very little money.

The shrewdest play of the platform committee here has been generally overlooked. That was the deep bow made to the Townsendites. The old age pension feature of the platform was actually one of its few surprises.

What the initiators of it did was to take the fundamental basis of the Townsend plan and propose to make it workable. That is, they promised pensions (no age mentioned) to aged workers financed by a sales tax. (The platform says only that it shall be a "broad tax," but what they had in mind was the sales tax, although they did not want to use that hated phrase.)

The idea, of course, was that Dr. Townsend, in his bitterness against President Roosevelt, will invite his followers to vote the republican ticket.

To most observers, the cut-and-dried nature of the proceedings here seemed unspectacular. On the surface, it was a dull party rally, as parties and rallies go.

But underneath there seemed to be a religious type of fervor among the delegates, something like that of the grass-roots convention. It was not by any means a sectarian type of religion, but rather a moral zeal, the energy and inspiration of Bryan.

For instance, the delegates seemed to let their lungs expand every time "Onward, Christian Soldiers" was played by the band. The hymn typified their feelings.

There will be more of that.

Final instructions passed around to republican delegates 12 hours before Governor Landon was nominated were confined to one telephoned sentence:

"Landon on the first ballot. Landon to write the platform. The convention to select the vice-presidential nominee."

This gives the accurate inner tone of the convention in the shortest possible space. It worked out exactly that way.

Note—While Mr. Landon objected to certain planks in the platform, his objections are a postscript to it. As it stands now, with his amendments, it is solely his.

The vice-presidential nominee was really the choice of the convention and not of Governor Landon.

It seems that the Landon people and the Knox folks had some personal inner misunderstandings in connection with the Illinois primary. These were largely personal and unimportant, but the two camps did not get along well after that. Also Colonel Knox was a close personal friend of Mr. Hoover and the Landon people consequently did not play pre-convention ball with him.

The only thing which the Landon people really had to do with the selection of the running mate was in killing off a number of eastern candidates. There were certain persons in the vice-presidential race they would not stand for. The political generals in control here believed that Colonel Knox was the second most logical choice.

The stories you have heard about the Landon people wanting Vandenberg were not overplayed. They tried by every means at their command to induce the Michigander to accept.

The real reason he would not seems to have been entirely personal. He is young in public life, 51 years old. His national political future is ahead of him. He did not want to choose the vice-presidential road because he thought it had a dead end. He wants to go places, and it is very likely that he will.

On October 9 of last year this column started off as follows:

"Governor Landon of Kansas is the man to watch in the race for the republican presidential nomination.

"Top men in the party through the west seem to be strong for him privately. Apparently they intend to keep their sentiments to themselves for a while to see how things shape up. But when the right time comes it looks now as if they will step out for the Kansas Coolidge."

Pearce Home Scene of Ceremony

THE North Winter street residence of Mrs. George J. Pearce was the setting for a lovely wedding Friday night when Miss Magda Jacobsen became the bride of William J. Davenport of Silverton. Dr. Grover C. Birtchet read the vows at 8 o'clock.

The bride wore a frock of pale green organdy and carried a bouquet of sweet peas, rosebuds and gardenias.

Her attendant was Mrs. Dan Boykin of Eugene, who wore a model of lavendar organdy and carried a bouquet similar to that of the bride.

Mr. Boykin served as best man.

A reception was held after the ceremony. Mrs. William Miles, mother of the bridegroom, and Mrs. George J. Pearce presided at the serving table, which was covered pink damask and centered with white iris and sweet peas.

For going away the bride chose a white knitted ensemble with matching accessories. Upon their return from the Oregon beaches Mr. and Mrs. Davenport will be at home in Silverton.

Woodburn Golf Club Enjoys Day

Woodburn—Mrs. Wayne B. Gill won the prize for low net with a score of 47-13-34 at the Woodburn Golf club Thursday, Women's day. Hostesses were Mrs. Frank Cannard, Mrs. A. DeJardin and Mrs. Sumner Stevens.

Shorey, Mrs. Sumner Stevens, Mrs. Burton Willeford, Mrs. Sidney Johnson, Mrs. George Jones and Mrs. Lavern Otjen.

Hostesses for next Thursday will be Mrs. Howard Miller, Mrs. G. E. Crosby and Alice Davidson.

Mrs. Ray Glatt and Mrs. Burton Willeford extended an invitation to the women of the club to be their guests for play at the Portland Broadmoor golf course Monday morning, June 15, followed by luncheon at the home of Miss Mary Braun.

Waldo Hills—The announcement of the marriage of Miss Margaret Hagen of Minneapolis and Rev. Sylvester Rue of Elbow, Canada, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rue of the Waldo Hills, June 6, at Trinity Lutheran church, Minneapolis, is being made.

Mrs. Rue was a member of the nurses' graduating class from Swedish hospital, Minneapolis, with the sisters of Rev. Rue, the Misses Ruth and Esther Rue. Rev. Rue was graduated from the Silverton high school and Augsberg seminary, Minneapolis and for the past two year has been pastor of the Lutheran congregation at Elbow where Rev. and Mrs. Rue will make their residence.

The Writer's section of the Salem Arts league will meet for an al fresco supper at the country place of Mrs. C. F. Lytle Tuesday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Susan Varty and Arthur Moore will be honored guests Monday evening when the White Shrine of Jerusalem meets in the Masonic temple at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Sophia Anderson will act as chairman of the affair.

Neighbors of Woodcraft and friends in district 21 are invited to a picnic Sunday as guests of the Silver Sands circle at Ocean Lake.

Dallas—Mrs. John Cerny entertained with a noon luncheon Thursday complimenting the teaching staffs of the junior high and elementary school buildings.

She was assisted in serving by the Misses Patricia Stockwell and Patricia Smith. Following luncheon wedding gifts were presented to Miss Edith Dunn and Rufus Franz, two members of the junior high faculty who are to be married this weekend, the former to the Rev. Walter Duff and the latter to Miss Virginia Leitch.

The guests were Miss Dunn, Miss Margaret Spencer, Miss Odessa Grant, Miss Dorothy Page, Miss Helen Butler, Mrs. Clyde Gibbs, Mrs. John Voth, Miss Genevieve Coad, Mrs. Myrtle Smith, Miss Edris Greene, Miss Ruth Cherry, Miss Dorothy Grutz, Miss Beatrice Price, Miss Ethel Jackson, Miss Katherine Hawkins, Miss Esther Cleveland, Miss Dorothy Cooke Burton Bell, Joseph Hartley, Rufus Franz and Almos LeFors.

daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Perry, who will be "on her toes" when she appears in the Barbara Barnes Dance Revue at the Grand theatre June 18-19.

Bib 'n' Tucker

by Roby Laughlin

FOR GOING AWAY . . . . the June bride is going to be a bit different and wear one of the chic San Gabriel tailored suits made of gabardine and linen . . . . Besides being the smartest bride of the month in choosing one of these dashing suits, she'll be the most comfortable . . . . This suit was first designed for men who wanted freedom in playing golf . . . and women immediately took the new style into their hearts, principally because of the wide, padded shoulders, and trim, fitted waistline . . The coat is made of tweed-linen and fastens from left to right as do men's coats . . . . There's a gathered yoke and half-belt in the back and three beautifully cut patch-pockets . . . The favorite color is a soft sky blue and is worn with a tailored skirt made of imported white gabardine . . . The blouse should be of handkerchief linen and there should be a dash of color in the boutonniere . . . . Mark our words! You'll look just as swank in this outfit as you will in your wedding gown . . . .

DARK WASHABLE . . . are THE SMART dresses this summer . . . . Some of the best dressed women in Paris and London have been clamoring for them so what should happen but that American debutantes decide they like them, too, and here they are with us! They're really very high style and you're bound to like them no end . . . They're just the right weight (so that you don't have to wear too many undies on hot days) and they're good looking and cool . . . . They come in dead black, crisp navy, rich brown, all trimmed with white . . Some of them are called the "Clipper," "Honey," "Betty Buttons" and "Sweetie Pie" . . . and pretty swell they are, too . . . . In fact, we'd say "extra swell!"

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN . . . . for an English accent in clothes . . . Although the Queen Mary has departed for her home country, she left behind her a very large ripple in the fashion circles and some of the things that the London couturiers brought over will take your breath away . . . particularly sports garbs which are said to be superb. . . . . The British influence will be in all shops before long and, as you might expect, you're going to see same mighty fine active sports clothes—for riding, hiking, golfing, shooting and the like! You'll have to admit that the English are unbeatable in this line. . .

SYMPHONY IN BLUE . . . . under twilight skies at the Multnomah stadium Monday evening during the coronation of Queen Janet . . . . We never realized before that women are so partial to blue but, in glancing over the crowd of some 25,000, we decided that blue, in all its variations, is still a winner . . . 'Twas very effective . . . broken here and there with patches of pink and yellow and the white of men's linen suits . . . .

The WPA music class entertained with a gala surprise party Friday night in compliment to the class instructor, Dr. R. W. Hans Seitz. The group called at the Seitz residence in South High street and an informal evening of music was enjoyed. A gift was presented to Dr. Seitz and supper was served at a late hour.

Present were Dr. and Mrs. Seitz, Miss Renska Swart, Miss Bernice Nelson, Miss Beulah McCollough, Mrs. Iris Heide, Miss Margaret Weisner, Mrs. Imogene Humphrey, A. J. Beck, Robert Rawson, Henry B. Koehler, Jack, Anton and S. H. Koch and Felix French.

Willamette auxiliary F.O.E. met Wednesday evening for its regular business meeting with all newly elected officers in their places.

Plans were made for the attendance of the auxiliary at the Oregon state convention at Silverton.

The social club met at the home of Mrs. Julia Smith for an all-day meeting with Mrs. Elsie Eobleman assisting. All officers and drill team members will meet at the Fraternal temple Wednesday afternoon for special meeting and rehearsal.

The Leslie Epworth League is giving its annual reception for the graduates of high school and college Tuesday evening, June 16. The affair will be held at the Poindexter home, 348 East Myers street, and calling hours are from 8 until 9:30 o'clock. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Those to be honored will be Miss Frances French and Miss Ruth Grace, Warren Bertelson, John Van Cadell, Ray Rhoten, Alfred French and C. F. French.

THE ENGAGEMENT — of Miss Constance Elizabeth Griffith and John Latta, Jr., formerly of Portland and now of Salem, is evincing much interest throughout the state. The betrothal news was released yesterday and although no date has been set for the wedding, Salem folk are looking forward to welcoming the attractive California girl when she comes here to make her home. The friendship of Miss Griffith with the Latta family dates back about 10 years and in that time seldom has a year passed that she has not visited the Lattas' Portland home with the Misses Riette, Emsie and Christian — and often times the Latta boys, Robin and John, were at home, too. While the Lattas were living on the Isle of Jersey, Miss Griffith visited them frequently while she was abroad one season. Her fiance's mother was Miss Emma Failing, known to many prominent capital folk, and he is now connected with Hawkins & Roberts.
