TRAGEDY ENACTED WITHOUT WARNING

Vancouver, Wash., Sept. 21 (AP)—Police today sought a motive which might have led Philip Van Laeken, 75-year-old father of four children, to shoot without warning his wife, a daughter and her friend, then take his own life with the fourth bullet.

Germaine, 26-year-old daughter, was not expected to live. Her father shot her in the spine with the first bullet as she stood at the kitchen sink washing dishes. He had just emerged from an adjoining room.

Theresa, Van Laeken's middle-aged wife, was given an even chance for recovery. She was shot in the neck.

E. A. Jenney, 27, who was visiting Germaine, was given a good chance to recover from a wound inflicted by the third bullet which entered his chin and coursed downward into his shoulder.

Impact of the bullets knocked each of the victims unconscious. As they lay crumpled on the kitchen floor, Van Laeken went upstairs and fired the shot that ended his life.

His wife regained consciousness about a half-hour after the shooting, police said, and summoned officers.

BANKERS OF NATION TOLD TO BE LIBERAL

San Francisco, Sept. 21 (AP)—Financial leaders from all sections of the country assembled here today for the opening session of the American Bankers' association convention, which is holding its 62nd annual convocation.

Today's program was devoted to the savings' division of the association and the general session will open tomorrow.

Problems discussed by speakers at the session today were devoted principally to the lowering interest rate on loans and the problem of meeting interest payments on deposits.

P. D. Houston, chairman of the board of the American National Bank, Nashville, Tenn., urged greater liberality by bankers.

"Bankers in their loan policies must not become too conservative," he warned. "Our conservatism should be tempered with some liberality. It is likely that the experience of recent years may have caused us to be somewhat over-conservative, and if such be the case, it is but a natural consequence. We should be interested in making productive loans, and, therefore, the purposes for which a loan is sought should be given consideration along with the security that is offered. A loan may be well and fully secured and yet not necessarily be a desirable loan for our bank."

J. Harvie Wilkinson, Jr., vice-president of the State-Planters Bank and Trust company, Richmond, Va., predicted that "interest rates in the next two years will average a somewhat higher figure than are the current quotations for money."

E. V. Kriek, vice president of the American Trust company, San Francisco, held that actual control of interest rates has not been developed.

WELLS CELEBRATES 70TH ANNIVERSARY

London, Sept. 21 (AP)—H. G. Wells, known as the youngest of the "big three" of modern English literature, celebrated his birthday today—but refused to disclose how old he is.

The record book showed him to be 70, but the British author denied this.

George Bernard Shaw was 80 last July 26. The third member of the literary triumvirate was Rudyard Kipling who died last January at the age of 70.

"It is now a race between Shaw and myself," Wells chuckled.

Wells already has written his own obituary describing his death which he predicted would come when he is 97. He recently began writing and directing a series of pseudo-scientific fantasies for a British motion picture company.

POWER PARLEY CALLED BY F D

Washington, Sept. 21 (AP)—Federal power officials prepared plans today for "power pools" to be submitted at a conference September 30 of public and private utility interests.

President Roosevelt, in issuing the call for the conference, said such a pool of private and public interests would benefit all concerned and make it possible to furnish the public with cheap and abundant power.

The conference will discuss the possible establishment of a southeastern power pool through the cooperation of the Tennessee valley authority and the private utility interests in that section.

The conference is being called at this time because the existing contracts between the commonwealth and southern, one of the big power utilities in the south, and the Tennessee valley authority, for interchange of power and common use of transmission facilities are due to expire soon.

Marvin McIntyre, secretary to Mr. Roosevelt, said the president hopes such a pooling of interests will not only be possible in the southeast but in other regions of the country as well, and that it will serve to promote the rapid expansion of the government's rural electrification program.

Thus the indications are that deposits west of the Rockies run well over four billions, possibly over 4 1/2 billions, and somewhere around one-tenth of the national deposits, lately estimated to be in the vicinity of 46 billions.

Carson Talks on Essentials of Prosperity

The road to prosperity in Oregon lies in getting out of debt and staying out, cleansing politics of false prophets, not being taxed out of existence and a militant and intelligent citizenry. Joseph K. Carson, mayor of Portland, declared at the first chamber of commerce luncheon of the season today noon. He urged long-range thinking and not trumped up issues of bunk and hokum with building and development in an orderly manner.

Development must be along the line of a systematic exploitation of resources for the benefit of the nation as a whole instead of the citizenry spending most of its time eternally dealing with the ne'er do well and crooked advocating fool and freak laws. It is impossible to escape honest labor and enterprise which is the first law of nature, Mayor Carson added.

"California is determined that the rate for power from Bonneville distributed in Portland 40 miles away shall not be lower than the rate from the Boulder dam, over 300 miles from Los Angeles," Mayor Carson said. "That state does not want the northwest to have any advantage that might lead to its industrial development." He called attention to the group that is seeking to have the direction of Bonneville in charge of Senator Bone, of Washington.

"We find adepts and crack-brains trying to get into politics at public expense and threatening those who have built up a business to attain success. They eternally seek to fasten debt upon the state which creates a heavy interest payment. These same people would not know a kilowatt from a mixed drink," he said, "yet these blab-mouth politicians would seek to tell the state how to carry on." Humanity must get in human effort for whatever it pays, Mayor Carson said in closing.

Accompanying Mayor Carson from Portland were City Commissioner Earl Riley, City Attorney Frank Grant and City Treasurer William Adams. A group of Portland realtors, here for the meeting tonight, were also introduced.
