PAPER PLANT PUBLICIZED

Lebanon—The Lebanon plant of the Crown-Willamette paper company is attracting national publicity on account of its many improvements in the making of sulphite papers. One magazine recently devoted an entire page to the local mill. Among improvements now being made is the 75,000 gallon water tower, the sound of steel workers and their hammers echoing throughout the north end of the city. One new feature now going strong is the new imprinting department, and allied stereotyping room. All manner of designs can now be printed just as the paper is manufactured. The local department is the only one in the west, and is the invention of W. E. Braun of Brunswick, Me.

During the past summer, and under the direction of Manager Dan Dupuis, the mill installed two new water wheels, replacing several obsolete ones, yet increasing the available horsepower. A new warehouse and enlarged offices have just recently been occupied. The supply of white fir in the hills above Lebanon is particularly adapted to the making of sulphite wrapping paper, a large quantity of which is used for wrapping dynamite. The Santiam water also favors the successful operation of the local mill which is noted for its continuous production.

The present operating heads are: Dan Dupuis, general superintendent; B. E. Sullivan, sulphite superintendent; R. D. Waddell, technical superintendent; Hugh C. Olds, office manager and chief accountant; J. O. Morris, steam and electrical engineer; E. C. Leckman, master mechanic; B. Weeks, finishing room and shipping foreman; H. C. Cooper, yard and cut-up plant superintendent.
