

U. S. GOLF ASSOCIATION PLACES LIMIT ON CLUBS

CHANGE WILL RAISE SCORES MANERO SAYS

New York, Jan. 1 (AP)—Tournament golfers, many of them accustomed to packing small trunks containing upwards of two dozen implements of the game, today were given just a year to decide which clubs can be dispensed with.

The United States Golf association announced that tournament golfers will be limited to not more than 14 clubs.

"The committee felt that a multiplicity of clubs tended toward mechanization of the game, one of whose great virtues lies in the opportunity it affords for full individual skill. In the earlier days players sometimes changed their swings to execute varied shots. The tendency in recent years has been to change only the club."

Tony Manero, the national open champion, who usually carries 19 clubs, supported this theory. While predicting the change will raise scores on an average of "at least one stroke per round," Manero added, "But it won't hurt my game because I've always depended upon my swing. Increasing or shortening it according to distance."

GARY TO STAY ON JOB UNTIL FIRST OF JUNE

Portland, Jan. 1 (AP)—The Oregon High School Athletic association persuaded John L. Gary, secretary, to reconsider his resignation and stay on until June 1.

The veteran secretary and superintendent of schools at West Linn previously announced he would withdraw at the winter meeting held here yesterday. He recommended employment of a full time secretary with offices at Portland.

Representatives from every district in the state approved limitation of interscholastic athletic eligibility to eight semesters instead of nine. The ruling goes into effect January 1, 1938.

A special committee will investigate an insurance program to protect young athletes in high school contests.

William E. King of Echo, whose appointment as delegate-at-large brought the number of "legislators" to 22, and Fred Wolf of Salem received appointments to the executive board. Other members are President Lynn Parr of Marshfield and Secretary Gary.

The association ordered member schools to employ its certified officials at all contests except in isolated districts where they may not be available.

Delegates also approved a move to reduce the number of "B" teams competing at the tournament held annually at Southern Oregon Normal school. In the past as many as 45 teams have entered with nearly 70 eligible. A preliminary elimination schedule will be organized.

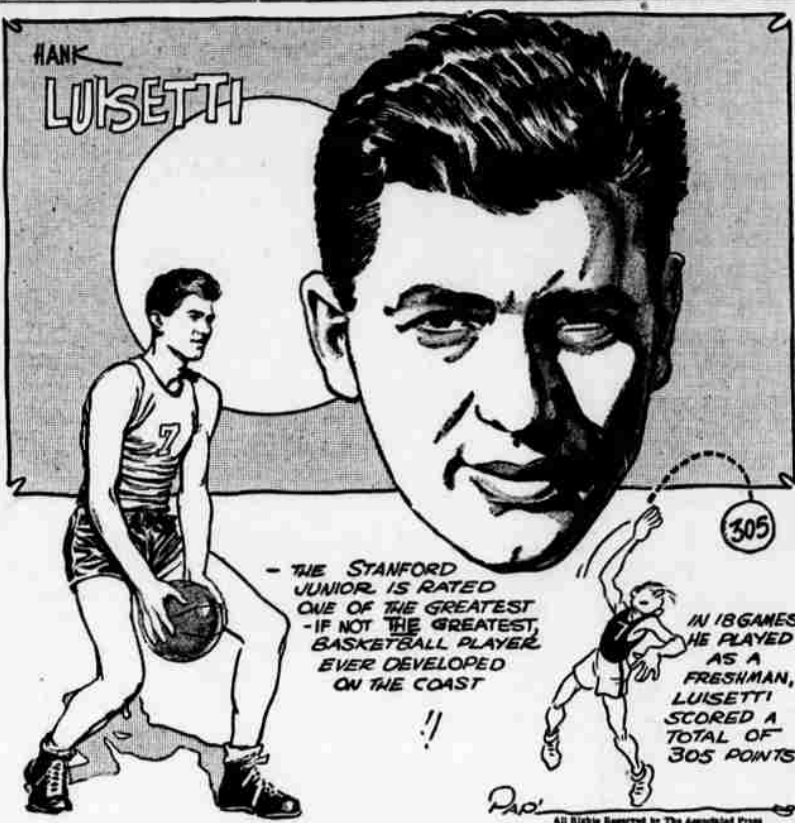

SPORT SLANTS

It is interesting to note that the middleweight division, once the most colorful and exciting class in boxing, is regaining some of its popularity. Not even the heavy-weight class boasts more big names in its history than the middleweight group.

Starting with Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil, who was the undisputed middleweight champion for several years until he ran up against George La Blanche in 1889, the list of champions and near champions of that group is studded with names like Bob Fitzsimmons, Tommy Ryan, Kid McCoy, Stanley Ketchel, Jack (Twin) Sullivan, Billy Papke, Johnny Gladdy, Frank Klaus, Mike Gilbons, Eddie McGorty, Jack Dillon, George Chip, Jeff Smith, Les Darcy, Harry Greb and Mickey Walker.

As in other divisions, the middleweight title has often been in dispute. Away back when La Blanche defeated Dempsey with his famous pivot blow, which was nothing but a flagrant foul, the public, or at least a great part of it, refused to consider La Blanche the champion, but continued to recognize Dempsey as the title-holder until he was knocked out by Bob Fitzsimmons in 1891. Fitz deserted middleweight ranks in 1896 to battle the heavyweights, although he could still easily make the middleweight limit of those days, 158 pounds.

RECOGNIZE RYAN
As soon as Fitz announced that he was going after the heavyweights, Tommy Ryan and Kid McCoy claimed the middleweight title. Ryan was recognized by the authorities as champion because even then McCoy was preparing to fight as light-heavy. When Ryan gave up the title along came Stanley Ketchel, who laid claim to the crown after he had whipped Jack (Twin) Sullivan, another claimant, in 1908. The title was held or claimed by fighters like Al McCoy, Mike O'Dowd, Johnny Wilson, Bryan Downey. The once glo-

LARGEST CROWD GREET SQUADS IN ROSE BOWL

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1 (AP)—Washington and Pittsburgh, a pair of powerful football teams that have appeared here five times and always left without winning, clashed in the 30th Rose Bowl game today before the largest crowd in the history of the event and the second richest gate.

The playing field of the huge rose-draped bowl was drenched by intermittent rains that began last Friday. Only a bright sun early today could make it hard and fast.

Should it rain before the battle starts at 2:15 p. m. PST, it might shove Pittsburgh into the post of favorite. Washington, which had been a 10-8 choice last week, steadily has fallen off in favor because of the possibility of a wet field which would slow down the Huskies' razzle-dazzle attack.

The vanguard of 87,196 persons who will pay more than $260,000 to see the game, started arriving in this city at the crack of dawn. The previous attendance high of 81,735 was set last year when Stanford beat Southern Methodist. And the record gate of $306,421.15 was set in 1930 when Southern California defeated Pittsburgh. The record crowd this year is due to addition of bleacher seats.

Neither coach would predict victory—and neither cared to figure how a wet field would affect their chances.

PIGSKIN GREATS PLAY GAME FOR CRIPPLED KIDS

San Francisco, Jan. 1 (AP)—College football stars, representing the gridiron greatness of nearly every section of the nation, line up here today in a pigskin classic founded and fought out for the common cause of charity.

The game opposed east against west; squads of 22 players from each half of the continent. They came from 32 colleges and universities and represented 41 cities throughout the United States.

Outcome of the game, twelfth since the first was played in 1925, was overshadowed by the cause. Proceeds of the contest go toward the annual upkeep of the Shriner's hospital for crippled children.

Each squad numbered some of the greatest college players of the 1936 season. Each one has completed college competition.

The Eastern team, coached by Andy Kerr of Colgate and Dick Hanley, formerly of Northwestern, listed nine men who won all-American recognition last season.

Western forces, drilled by Orin Hollingsbery of Washington State college and Percy Looney, formerly coach of Denver university, included two stars ranked as all-American calibre. Outnumbered in names, the west nevertheless presented an array of talent calculated to gladden the heart of any mentor.

Mainly because of the many stars in its line-up the East moved into action as the 10 to 8 favorite. In every other department, the two teams shaped up on even terms. Last year's game went to the East by a 19 to 3 count. Over the years, however, the West holds a decided advantage with seven victories against four for the East.

BUCKEYES DEFEAT BRUIN CAGE TEAM

Los Angeles, Jan. 1 (AP)—Ohio State's basketball prestige was upheld today by the record of twin victories in a pair of doubleheaders involving Washington, Southern California and U.C.L.A.

The barnstorming Buckeyes, who beat Southern California 40-38 Wednesday night, overwhelmed U.C.L.A. 48-39 on New Year's eve.

Washington, which edged out U.C.L.A. 52-51 in an overtime contest in the first doubleheader, was humbled by Southern California, 45-31, in the windup program.

Washington's Huskies appeared off form while Southern California piled up a 21-7 advantage in the first half and kept at least 6 points ahead throughout the final period.

Kelley 3rd Rater, Pitt Will Whip Huskies, States McLeMORE

By HENRY McLEMORE

Miami, Jan. 1 (UP)—If you would like to make a lot of money, the minute you read this you will grab your hat from the hat rack (where it should have been placed when you came in if you are of a tidy nature) and run to your corner bookmaker and make the following bets: 1. Mississippi State to defeat Duquesne in a thrilling battle dedicated to the glorification of the orange.

2. Pittsburgh, with married men at important positions along the line, to humiliate Washington in a game characterized by mud, rain and no sunshine.

3. Louisiana State university to beat the Broncos of Santa Clara, who in the past six months have released more publicity than any other university in America.

4. Texas Christian university to triumph over Marquette university, an organization which rose to fame on the fact that Mrs. Gueppe had twins and Ralph Metcalfe could always run second to Jesse Owens, and Sammy Baugh can out-pitch Buzz Buidv any day.

5. Auburn to emerge victorious over Villanova in the Bacardi Bowl at Havana (this prophecy is made with reservations).

6. It is very difficult for me to select the winner of the Sun Bowl at El Paso in which Hardin-Simmons will engage the lean-flanked athletes from Texas Mines. For two months my correspondent at Hardin Mines (I'm sorry, I mean Texas Simmons) has wired me collect that of all the bowl games which will be bowled on New Year's day the Sun Bowl is the hot darndest. I questioned this with a collect telegram, I told this correspondent, who wears a cap with a button on top of it, that I could not agree with him.

7. My idea of the best New Year's game of all is the one in San Francisco, involving the eastern gladi-

ARMORY FIGHTS START AT 2:30

Unless further substitutions are made before 2:30, the time scheduled for the first preliminary, Jack Mitten of Chicago and Tiny Cooper of Hubbard will square away in one of the 10 round fights this afternoon at the armory. The other half of the double main event is slated to bring together Frank Riggi of Brooks and Jack Tobey of Portland. Tobey was substituted for King Ketchel of Vancouver, who was reported late yesterday as being unable to fill the engagement. Mitten had previously been announced as a pinch hitter for Danny Pahl, who suffered a broken rib in his battle with Frank Riggi.

Three preliminaries will precede the main events: Bud Peterson, Independence, vs. Johnny Stewart, Portland; Wes Hayes, Portland, vs. Walter Steele, Dallas; Paul Gullio, Scio, vs. Mike Strong, Vancouver. Unless another arena is secured, this afternoon's card will be the last one until after the legislative session.
