

Man Chased By Officers Shoots Self

Roseburg, Ore., June 13 (AP)—Eugene, a road race with state police near here, a suicide attempt, and a crash into a two-story Roseburg building made up a spectacular afternoon for an unidentified man who lies in a death in a hospital here.

The man, about 25, and well-dressed, drove his car into the building with such force it caved in the wall and penetrated into a room in which Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reed, owners of the building, and John George were seated. They were scratched and bruised.

The driver, unhurt in the crash, was unconscious with a bullet wound in his head and powder burns on his face. Police presume the crash resulted from his attempt at suicide.

State Police James Maulding and Roy O'Mara were in pursuit of the man at the time of the crash, having received a request from Eugene to apprehend the man, wanted for a holdup and car theft.

They identified the car as it entered the city from the north and gave chase when the driver ignored their stop warning. The officers fired but apparently without effect for the fugitive sped through the town with the officers in pursuit. At the south limits of the city the car suddenly swerved into the building.

The man was driving a car registered to Raymond Ohlson, Eugene.

The injured man was identified as the man who eluded officers at Eugene. He was asleep in a car in a prune orchard about three miles north of Eugene when police were summoned. When they approached the car the man fled into the woods, brandishing a gun which he did not fire. The machine thus abandoned was stolen from Vancouver Motors, Ltd., of Vancouver, B. C., on June 10. It was taken from the Vancouver company's drive-in garage.

Vancouver police identified the car through the number but said they could offer no clues to the identity of the driver.

A few minutes after the man escaped, Eugene police received report of the theft of the Ohlson car. Later they spotted it and tried to run it down but the driver outdistanced them. They then broadcast the alarm, which was picked up at Roseburg.

The man was described as 5 feet, 10 or 11 inches tall, with dark hair and eyes, weight about 155 or 165 pounds. In the car he left an army coat, whether Canadian or American could not be determined because the buttons had been removed, and a pair of trousers.

State police at Roseburg said this morning that they had been unsuccessful in efforts to establish the identity of the fugitive. Fingerprints taken from the body have been forwarded to identification bureaus. State Police Lieutenant E. J. Dunn of Medford arrived here last night to assist with the investigation.

Graduates Hear Dr. Douglas' Sound Advice

Intermingling humor with bits of philosophy and dropping in a phrase or so of good common sense, Dr. Lloyd C. Douglas, preacher, author and lecturer gave an entirely different sort of commencement address late Saturday as he addressed members of the class of 1938 of Willamette university before a capacity crowd at the Ellmore theatre. Those who went to the theatre expecting to hear one of the old fashioned talks, full of high sounding phrases and replete with warnings against the many pitfalls which confront youth of today, were agreeably disappointed for the speaker expressed the opinion that the country wasn't going to the dogs and let the matter rest there.

He likened the graduate to the motorist who is starting up a long grade but who does not find out he has the right of way until he reaches the summit and is ready for the long coast down again. "The question is," he added, "how are you coming up the grade?" "Don't let anybody scare you with crises," Dr. Douglas cautioned; "there is a magnet which is pulling conditions to an orderly end, and no one is being pushed up the grade."

In a good humored manner, Dr. Douglas spoke concerning his writing and the adaptation of his books to the motion picture screen. He advised budding authors not to put too much stock in plots, maps, charts and the like. "Just start to write," he said. "If there is no plot, so much the better. There isn't any reason why the readers should be given the privilege of having all of the suspense." Following the address, Dean Frank M. Erickson presented those receiving bachelor of arts degrees to President Baxter. Those having completed their law work were presented by Dean Roy Lockenour while the three students eligible for music degrees were introduced by Cameron Marshall, head of the music department.

Longview Trio Guests of C of C

Three representatives from the center of the world's largest lumber milling operations, Longview, Wash., were guests of the Salem Chamber of Commerce today. They are Wendell Judd, Ed Johnson and Jack McCutchan of the Longview Junior Chamber of Commerce, who are en route to the national Junior Chamber convention at Oakland, Cal., June 15 to 18.

The trio is making a good will tour through Oregon and California before attending the conclave. Greetings of the Salem Chamber were extended by Manager Fred D. Thielson.

Judd, who is head of the Longview organization, extended an invitation to residents of the Salem area to visit Longview and the Long-Bell and Weyerhaeuser lumber mills, largest in the world.

A motion picture produced by the Weyerhaeuser Timber company, showing practically every phase of the lumber and pulp industry, will be exhibited by the delegates at the convention.

Among the displays which the Longview group will sponsor at the Oakland session is a huge "Paul Bunyan" axe, which has played a prominent part in civic celebrations since the city was founded in 1923.

Vandenberg Sees Serious Crisis in Nation

Schenectady, N. Y., June 13 (AP)—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, (R., Mich.), said today that "representative democracy" is threatened by a drift "toward the concentration of central power in executive hands."

"We are nearer to government by executive decree and by bureaucracy than ever before in our history," he declared in a speech prepared for the Union college commencement.

Senator Vandenberg, who received an honorary degree of doctor of civil law, termed the situation a "crisis in character" and said "we cannot expect an automatic protection against the restless forces of innovations which have smashed democracy elsewhere among enlightened peoples."

"I speak to you in the profound belief that the crisis which America confronts is infinitely more than a crisis in government or economics; that it is, above all else, a crisis in character—the character of our institutions, the character of citizenship itself," the senator declared.

"We are being taught by shrewd oracles to hate one another. The consciousness of classes—one against another—is being fostered by adroit agitators . . . in such a conflict the common welfare gasps for breath."

"We must recapture mutual confidence and the spirit of co-operation. We must repudiate multiple rebellions. We must deserve solidarity by mutual comprehension of our common problems."

Animal Fertilizer Lockjaw Source

Del Monte, Calif., June 13 (AP)—Your own garden—if animal fertilizer is used—might be more of a hazard for contracting lockjaw than wounds suffered in falls on the streets or scratches from rusty nails.

Dr. Karl Meyer, director of the Hooper Foundation for Medical Research at the University of California, told the American Academy of Pediatrics yesterday that lockjaw, known to medical science as tetanus, is almost as widespread in the United States as diphtheria.

A mile
S-T-R-E-T-C-H-E-S
when it's STOP-and-GO

More turns of your engine for each turn of your wheels
—and costs go up!

A MILE OF STOP-AND-GO DRIVING may be two miles or more to your engine. In "low" gear, your engine makes about 12 turns for each turn of your wheels. In "second," about 8 . . . in "high," only about 4.

You drive a mile, but how far your engine runs depends on how many times you stop and start—how much of the mile is in low and second.

Shell engineers found that getting away from a traffic stop can waste enough "undigested" gasoline to carry you 1/2 of a mile.

To cut this waste and its high cost, they found a way to rearrange the chemical structure of gasoline, which makes every drop of fuel usable to your motor under all driving conditions.

You can save on the cost of your stop-and-go driving by the regular use of Super-Shell. There's a Shell dealer near you.
