LOVE ON THE RANGE BY NELSON C. WY

The story so far: Trying to escape trouble, "Blue" Ankrum becomes enmeshed in a love affair with a girl named Lee. Under the name of Abe Streeter, he accepts a job at the Tronier Ranch, which is in difficulties. Lee, his father Ankrum's old friend, the Strutherses, then learns they are coming for a visit. The range boss, Mose Hackett, tries to put Ankrum off the ranch, and Ankrum knocks him out.

Chapter Seven

There was an accusing glare in the range boss's eyes. "You—you hit me!" "I sure did. Twice!" said Ankrum. "You wanted to make something out of it?" "No damn man can do that to me—you're fired!" He licked his lips, cleared his throat and said again, less certainly: "You're fired." Ankrum laughed. "I told you this afternoon that Abe Streeter's on your payroll. He's going to stay on it till it suits him to drift along. Now look—" Ankrum's tones grew soft and earnest: "When I see a tarantula I usually aim to let it alone. But when a tarantula jumps at me I squish it. Do you understand?"

Hackett's hand dropped in swift descent to his holstered weapon. There it paused, fingers clamped about it but, Ankrum had not moved an inch. His face was colorless and hard as a granite crag. A moment ago Hackett had had notions—vicious notions. He would have shot down this apparently unarmed interloper as swiftly as he could get his gun from leather. But now, something stayed his hand. The will to murder had been written on his face, but now it was wakened, twitching. He could not have drawn that gun for all the wealth of El Paso.

More Quack-Quack

Of all the times Mrs. Quacko had had a quack-quack chat with Mrs. Quacker she had never seen her so impressed.

"It takes about a week to travel from one side of the ocean to the other some one said around the pond," quacked Mrs. Quacker. "Just think of that! Why, quack-quack, we can go back and forth in a few minutes. Imagine all the minutes and minutes that make up a week."

"But we're not going to travel across it," quacked Mrs. Quacker. "As I told you we're going to be close to the sea, but not on it. We are going to see how some of the creatures live who choose their homes along the coast."

"Just as you went around and visited the countryside and saw the animals last year?" asked Mrs. Quacker.

Mrs. Quacker nodded. "Well, my dear, I must be going. I just waded down to tell you I hoped you would have a pleasant summer, and that I would come to see you as soon as we returned."

"Yes, that was kind of you," quacked Mrs. Quacker.

Mrs. Quacko was puzzled. She had expected to impress Mrs. Quacker, to make her a little envious. She had meant to show-off. But Mrs. Quacker was very quiet. "Don't you think my feathers look a little droopy?" she asked. "Do you think I'm looking quite myself? Well, maybe I'll get along without a change of scene. Yes, do come and see me when you get back. I'll still be here."

"Mrs. Quacker!" exclaimed Mrs. Quacko. "I have an idea. Wait! I'll be right back. I just want to say something to Willy Nilly!"

The watching punchers saw nothing menacing in Ankrum's attitude. But they could not see his eyes, and it was into Ankrum's eyes that Hackett stared. They swam with a light that challenged Hackett to draw that gun. It was sheer bluff; Hackett knew it. Yet he paused to wonder—and was lost. He was lost, and knew it. One tiny upward pressure on that gun and death would grab him. Hackett shivered and raised his hands. Bare contempt lay in the cold grin parting Ankrum's lips. "All right, Hackett," he drawled. "You can take your hands down. Now that we understand each other I reckon we'll get along. You better be gettin' on to that line camp 'less you're figuring to spend the night here."

Some courage had returned to the range boss while Ankrum talked. He wondered now what could have caused him to refrain from drawing and sending this drifter on to drier pastures. With the wonder came resentment that he had been bluffed before his men again. As he lowered his arms an ugly light sprang into his eyes. "Don't crow, hombre. You ain't heard the last of this," he snarled and, swinging around, he made his way to the corral to get his horse. As he jerked the rope from his saddle Ankrum's laugh, deep and throaty, rang in his ears.

The following morning was bright and hot. Side by side on the front seat of the Rafter T's touring car, Lee Tronier and the new hand were speeding across the sandy miles to where El Paso lay beyond the Huaco mountains.

Ankrum drove with both hands, staring straight ahead. His smooth cheeks showed close contact with a razor, his clothes were neatly brushed and his boots shone like polished bottle glass. Yet his lips were pressed in lines of indifference. His greeting of the girl had been courteous but brief. Thereafter, for the past two hours, he had spoken not at all. He was politely uncommunicative. Lee's chic attire fitted her willowy figure; her little hat was smart but offered a minimum of protection from the sun's glare.

She studied Ankrum with curiosity. There was a bold sweep to his nose that matched well, she thought, the forward jut of his rugged chin. As she watched him the impressions formed at their first meeting, that turbulent scene in Pasa Pinto, were strengthened. She found him vital, colorful, intriguing. Undoubtedly there was much more to him than appeared upon the surface; several times she had sensed a vein of bitterness that excited her curiosity.

"You're not overly conversational at this morning," she observed. "Cat got your tongue?" "Nope." "Feeling kind of low?" she asked, nettled that he had not turned his head nor even cast a glance at her. "No lower'n usual. I reckon."

"Weighty Problems" He still stared straight ahead. For a time she left him, her head upturned in pique. He did not have to talk to her, of course. She thought it likely she could survive without his conversation. But as the miles sped by, curiosity overcame resentment.

"When I left you last night," she hoped her voice sounded as firm and even as she intended. "I noticed someone lounging in the shadows by the stable door. It looked like Hackett. You haven't had any further trouble with him, I hope?" "No, ma'am. No trouble at all."

"You've seen him, though?" "I expect we sort of nodded to each other, ma'am."

Had she caught a note of sarcasm in his voice? Had she really observed a tiny glint in the eye that, nearest her, Streeter kept upon the road? Lee wondered. She determined to have a talk with one of the men when they got back. "You don't like Mose Hackett very much, do you?" "Oh, Mose is all right, if a fel-
