In the Name of Safety Here Are Rules That Will Keep Your Children From Harm's Way

- To Parents in Cities
1. Train children to cross streets only at corners and to obey traffic signals.
 2. Select the best and safest routes to and from school and insist that youngsters stick to these routes.
 3. Teach them not to play with pets or toys while in the lanes of vehicular traffic.
 4. Tell children the objective of school safety patrols and encourage them to give full cooperation.
 5. Give youngsters practical safety lessons by pointing out driving and pedestrian errors at every opportunity.
 6. Impress upon children that the curb is the danger line and encourage them to remain on the sidewalks.
 7. Reward youngsters for careful attention to traffic and study of their safety lessons.
 8. Show your own interest in traffic safety by cooperation with safety groups and having a part in developing a safe community.
- To Parents in Rural Areas
1. Encourage youngsters to pay close attention to drivers of school buses.
 2. Stress the necessity for care in crossing the highway on entering or leaving a school bus.
 3. Point out that walking on the highway so as to face oncoming traffic is the safe way.
 4. Urge school authorities to offer safety lessons and posters in schoolrooms and encourage youngsters to cooperate.

Train High School Student In Proper Handling of Car

By Burton W. Marsh
Director of Safety and Traffic Engineering
American Automobile Association

With more than 5,000 high schools offering some form of driver and pedestrian education during the last school year, and a substantial increase anticipated during the term ahead, this new advance in education gives promise of giving the country a new generation of responsible drivers and pedestrians. Why driver education and training in high schools? The answer is found in a few statistics—and there will be very few. Available figures show that 49 per cent of all accident deaths involving persons in the 15 to 24 age group are due to motor vehicle accidents. It is in this age group that is found the greatest number of new drivers and those who will soon feel the thrill of being behind a smooth and powerful engine.

Obviously, high schools offer the logical approach to this group and the students are reached at a period when they are most receptive to training. It is now widely recognized that the fact that most anyone has been allowed to drive in the past, without regard for their physical qualifications, driving skill, or willingness to respect the rights of others, has had much to do with highway crashes and tangles.

Important Daily Activity

Therefore, from the standpoint of the future, driver education and training is one of the soundest approaches to the accident problem. And there is widespread interest on the part of educators in training students in the practical arts of ad-

A Word to Adult Drivers

The fact that little children soon will be going back to school puts an added burden of responsibility on every motorist. Automobile drivers must realize that no matter how carefully guarded, no matter how carefully schooled the children may be in traffic safety, there is always the danger of an over enthusiastic youngster forgetting, for the moment, and darting out into a moving lane of traffic.

Motorists, therefore, must be doubly careful in school neighborhoods. Motor car brakes should be in perfect condition for sudden stops. Smooth tires must be discarded for new ones with good brakes.

Before school starts is the time for every motorist to have his car checked for the fall season of driving with safety of the school child foremost in mind.

Scarth Family Makes Ready to Move Soon

Silverton—Mr. and Mrs. James A. Scarth and their family have made definite plans to move to Philomath, with Scarth taking over his newly acquired business by the first of the week, and the family making the change of residence by the 15th of September.

Scarth will be proprietor and manager of the Philomath Feed and Seed store. He had been in the firm of Scarth and Sons here for the past number of years. The father, William Scarth, and the
