

Lebanon Area Proving Tops With Fine Cows

Lebanon—The Lebanon area is rapidly gaining the distinction as one of the finest producers of top milk cows. It is illustrated in the report of O. M. Stevenson, Lebanon business man.

Stevenson, who is owner of a local auction house, reported that he is shipping to one of California's better known dairies a cargo of A-1 spotted Guernseys, valued at $3500. Of the shipment of 50 head, about 30 were bred and raised in this vicinity.

Prices of the cows range from $40 to better than $100. The dairy is located in Bakerfield, and is one of the most modern in the state. This is the second order its owner has placed for cows raised in the Willamette valley.

Bakery is Remodeled

Lebanon—Extensive remodeling of the front of the Munyan Bakery has been completed by James Burtenshaw, the changes including new black tile front, new glass windows and new tile entrance walk. Mrs. Frances Millap of Sacramento, Calif., is the owner of the building housing the bakery and she made the repairs to the property.

Text Book Rental Plan Presented

Monmouth—A text-book rental plan is to be tried out in the Monmouth high school for the coming year.

The donation of books by boys and girls who have graduated from the local school within the past three or four years, will result in a definite savings to students. The rental fee to a student for all the texts he needs for all his courses for the entire school year will be $2.50. For single semesters the rental will be $1.75. Each student will supply his own work-books, notebooks, typing supplies, paper, pencils and other requirements. After the plan is established it can be maintained at little cost to the school district, according to Principal M. R. Thompson.

Rental texts will be available at the opening of the high school on Monday, September 19.

Dance Ruckus Near Albany Causes Injury

Albany—Carl McCalley, employed at Tumble Inn dance hall, is in the Albany general hospital suffering a severe wound on his head near the left temple, sustained when allegedly hit by a beer bottle wielded by Andrew Henrock, COC boy from Camp Arboretum. Henrock is in the Linn county jail under $500 bond awaiting investigation by the Linn county circuit court grand jury.

The alleged altercation occurred when McCalley, according to the police report, remonstrated with Henrock following the dance for drinking on the grounds surrounding the hall. According to the report, Henrock became angered and hit McCalley with the bottle of beer out of which he was drinking.

Hospital attaches report McCalley's condition as being satisfactory Tuesday.

Farmers Jubilant
Albany—Farmers, with but few exceptions, were jubilant in Linn county over the precipitation of 1.40 inches which fell here Sunday and Monday. It was revealed by County Agent Floyd Mullen Tuesday. The main reason for the welcome which the rain was greeted by the farmers, Agent Mullen said, was the fact that the rainfall will start pasture grass to growing.

For the past three months the pastures has been browned and seared and little green feed has been available for livestock all over the county.

Hops throughout the county are pretty well cleared up, Mullen said, so little damage from the rainfall will be noted in this line.

Prunes are not quite far enough advanced, Mullen said, so that the rain would cause much damage to this crop.

Farmers also report little damage done to remaining fruit crops. Farmers throughout the county have finished most of their harvesting, with all grains in the granaries and hay crops in the barns, Mullen said.
