Veterans Receive Christmas Gift

Every disabled World War veteran who spends Christmas in a hospital will receive a Christmas gift from the American Legion auxiliary, according to Mrs. Harry Wechter, rehabilitation chairman of Capital unit of the auxiliary. Last Christmas, gifts went to 83,470 hospitalized veterans and approximately the same number are expected to be remembered this year.

The gifts are purchased and prepared for distribution by the state organizations of the auxiliary, with cooperation of local units. Each state supplies gifts for all veterans in hospitals within the state. States which have a large number of hospitalized veterans compared to their auxiliary membership receive help from the national organization.

The gifts have an average value of one dollar, and are selected, as far as possible, to meet the individual needs and desires of the veterans. Where practical, they are presented to the disabled men by auxiliary members visiting the hospitals. In many of the hospitals, Christmas trees are decorated and Christmas parties and entertainments given.

In addition to the work for the men in the hospitals, the auxiliary contacts the needy families of these men and supplies Christmas food and gifts. At a number of hospitals arrangements have been made for the disabled veterans to select gifts for their children, and these are sent in the name of the veteran. Last year this family contact service reached 7875 families at Christmas time.

The Christmas activities are only part of a continuous program carried on throughout the year by the auxiliary to aid disabled war veterans. Mrs. Wechter said. Government hospitals are visited regularly by trained workers, handicraft articles made by the men are sold, the American Legion's service and legislative work for veterans supported, and scores of other activities conducted to promote the happiness and recovery of the disabled men.
