

Sex Story Purveyor Run Down by Author

Philadelphia, Jan. 21 (U.P.)—A dealer in obscene literature started a federal prison term Friday as a result of the slighting of Courtney Riley Cooper, author of crime stories and close friend of J. Edgar Hoover.

Federal Judge Harry E. Kalodner sentenced Samuel Weinstein, alias Albert Schaeffer, to a year and a day, gave him a five-year suspended sentence and placed him on five years' probation on charges of sending obscene books through the mail.

"I was appalled by the number of sex crimes," Cooper told the court. "Criminologists agree that free access to books on sex is in part responsible. I decided to gather material for a book on the effect of obscenity on youth."

Cooper said he posed as an illiterate muck soil farmer and gave his Sebring, Fla., address in communicating with Weinstein, from whom he obtained a book called "Midnight Intimacies" and a set of two volumes titled "Memories of Madame Madeline."

"I agreed to pay $15 for 'Midnight Intimacies' and $45 for the others," Cooper testified. "I found them to be the most vile and rotten material ever written."
