OLD HOME WEEK MURDER

by Phoebe Atwood Taylor

The characters: Asay Mayo, Cape Cod sleuth; Zeb Chase, young Baked Bean heir; Jane Warren, Mary Randall's ward Yesterday; Mary Randall, antique dealer, is shot.

Chapter Seven
"Keep it Quiet!"

It had not occurred to Zeb, as it had to Asay, that the blasting sound of the last piece of fireworks had preceded the flash of lights by a good ten seconds. It had sounded like a gun because it was a gun, behind them somewhere in Hell Hollow. And in that interval between the gun shot and the real sound of the fireworks explosion, Asay's keen ear had caught something that sounded like the cry of a loon.

Man in the Iron Mask

Jane Warren opened the door to Asay's lousy knock, but he noticed that she didn't slip off the guard chain until she saw who was outside on the step.

"Mr. Mayo!" she said. "Why, come in. Look, I'd no idea this afternoon that you were the Mayo, the Great Asay! Sara didn't tell me. But Mary said it must be. She was quite excited. She wanted to see you about something, and if she hadn't been so dead tired, she'd have driven over to Sara's. Go into the living room an sit down—oh, turn that radio off, will you, Zeb? The static is simply terrific. I've been trying to get a London concert on the short wave. I'll see if Mary won't get up. It's time for her hot milk, anyway, and she might as well have it in here—"

"Tender way to greet your suitor," Zeb grumbled as Jane went out of the room. "So tender and touching. Turn off the radio, punk, the static's lousy. We might almost be married. Asay, what eats you? Why this Man in the Iron Mask attitude? You wanted to come here, didn't you? You virtually forced me—oh, sit down and stop being grim and tight-lipped! You make me—Jane! Jane—"

She wavered on the threshold, clinging to the door knob for support. Her face was ghastly under its tan.

"Look after her," Asay said. "She's going to faint. Grab her while I see what—"

"What do I do?" Zeb asked helplessly.

"Grab her!" fore she topples, clump! Put her on the couch."

He hurried into the lighted bedroom on the other side of the front hall, stopped short, and swallowed. For ten minutes he stood there. Then, locking the door behind him, he returned to Zeb and Jane.

"She's dead," Zeb said. "She—Asay, you won't come to!"

From under the girl's shoulders Asay removed three pillows and thrust them under her neck. Then he swung her head over the side of the couch.

"What're you doing?" Zeb said.

"Her head—"

"The idea," Asay informed him, "is for the blood to run that way. Find some whiskey, or spirits of ammonia—find something, can't you? Haven't you ever seen anyone faint before? What you modern boys do miss. Probably wouldn't know even how to cut a stay string—"

"Asay, what's happened? What's the matter with Mary Randall? I'm going to see—"

"No, you're not!" Asay grabbed him. "Someone," he said firmly, "that's been killed by deer ball ain't a nice sight to think of, let alone see. If you act this way over a faint, you'd probably faint, too."

"Someone's shot Mary? How? Why?"

"She was sittin' in a chaise lounge by the window," Asay said. "Apparently she leaned forward past the window. As she did, someone outdoors let go with both barrels of a shotgun. Deer ball. Marble size. Now, tend to that girl." He picked up the telephone. "Oh, she's comin' to? Well, get water. Is this a private line?"

"Billingsgate 327," Zeb said vaguely. "I guess so."

"Asay cranked at the phone bell. "Hello, Nellie? Hi. Say, get me

The static was awful on the short wave, and then the fireworks kept banging. I did hear one awfully loud noise, but I thought it was the fireworks finale. Is she really dead, Asay?"

"Fraid so, Jane, did your aunt—"

"Godmother."

"Did she have any enemies?"

"Never heard of one. Dealers and customers both liked her. She—"

"Relatives? What about them?"

"Her husband's dead, her people are mostly in England, and the few over here live on the west coast. She has a daughter, Eloise. She went up town for the going on, with Mr. Prettyman."

Asay raised his eyebrows. "Mister Who?"

"Prettyman," Zeb said. "Terius Prettyman. He's in the insurance business. Old Prettyman at the point's son. He's fifty-odd. Look, have you met Eloise, Asay?" He caught Jane's eye. "Oh, well, well, she's all the near relations Mary had, anyway."

"All and only," Jane said. "I—Asay, I appreciate the way you're beating about the bush, but let's have the worst. What is it?"

"Shotgun in the shed"

"Without meanin' the least disrespect to Mrs. Randall," Asay said, "the worst'll be to blow this Old Home Week sky high, an' to put the town in debt so much it'll never recover. This sort of thing acts two ways. Some few folks'll come to gape. But the majority'll leave as fast as their cary'll start, particularly when they learn how this happened. I'd say that ninety-five per cent of the people who've planned to spend the week here, they'll look at the thickness of their walls, an' consider how many times they pass by a lighted window, an' promptly exit. Until we get to the bottom of this, the headlines'll be 'Madman Loose' or 'Maniac at Large.' You, an' Miss Randall, you'll get headlines, too."
