The Creeping Man

by Frances Shellev Wees

Yesterday, Michael says he doesn't believe in the note—it's too vague. He finds a gray box in the cold-air register of the study.

Chapter 18 Just Pebbles

Bunny drew a deep breath and settled into her chair. "You're still talking about voluntary disappearance, Michael," she said quietly. "You've broken the ice. Now go on to what's more likely. 'Oh, well,' said Michael lightly. 'If you must have it.' He dropped down into the big chair by the desk. 'Murder,' he said. 'Tuck moved restlessly in her chair. Michael glanced at her, and went on. 'Robbery, jealousy, hate, he said. 'Three possible motives. Everything comes under those three heads.' 'Robbery, the diamonds,' Bunny murmured. 'Yes, and that will take in the largest circle of suspects. From Morrie Murchison down to Higgins—and beyond. An unknown thief could have murdered him for the diamonds.' 'Scarcely,' the district attorney said with a twinkle. 'You can't go too far, Michael. You'd have a lot of little fine threads to pick up if you start talking so.' 'Very well,' Michael conceded. 'No unknowns. Well, then . . . Higgins is the most likely suspect.' 'Piffle,' said Bunny. 'Not alone Michael. He hasn't the brains.' 'No. Well, to go on, Jealousy.' 'The lady's husband,' murmured Tuck.

"Yes. But first we'll have to find the lady. So far there doesn't seem to be any." The district attorney sat forward suddenly in his chair, and gazed intently into the fire. Bunny was watching him. She frowned to herself. Michael was watching her. "There is, of course," he said slowly. "Another possibility there, Mrs. Murchison is a most attractive woman." Gray Box Bunny shut her eyes. Tuck stared at Michael. "You mean . . ." she began. He shook his head at her. "Any one might be in love with Mrs. Murchison," he told her. Her eyes were still fixed on his. He glanced at Bunny. "Of course," Tuck said quietly. "A perfect stranger might. Some one we haven't heard of at all." "Someone who lives in Chicago," muttered the district attorney. "And the last point," Michael went on hastily. "Hate." His father turned and looked at him. "Where do you put revenge my lad?" he asked. "It's a funny queer, fermenting thing. It grows often on unlikely soil."

"Hate takes in all that," Michael decided. "All types of enmity and revenge. It gives us a wide course." "I don't believe he was the sort of a man one hates," Tuck said swiftly. "I think his brother is a perfect darling. So there!" "I wish," said Bunny slowly. "I wish we could find the diamonds." "Oh, as for that," said Michael loftily. "It's very simple. I know where they are."

Three astonished faces turned toward him. Two mouths fell open. One pair of shaggy brows bent over keen gray eyes. "Michael!" With elaborate leisure he got up from his chair, and turned around. On the floor at his feet was the grating of the cold-air register. "Of course," he said. "I may be mistaken. But I somewhere in this room, if there are any. And this is a fairly new house—no secret passages or sliding panels in it. So—"

"The pipe!" Tuck cried, coming to stand beside him. "The cold air pipe!" They were all beside him now peering down through the grating. Michael knelt. He had the paper knife from the desk in his hand. He applied it to the screws on each pipe. He looked up to find them regarding him intently. There was a red spot in each of his cheeks. "Well?" Michael asked. There was an expression of the utmost disgust on John Forrester's face. "There's something for you to work on, Michael," he told his son. "It'll not be fit for ladies' ears."

Love Letters Tuck seized the papers from the desk where he had dropped them. "Come on, Bunny," she said, "this seems to have its possibilities." "My dear girl," her father-in-law said helplessly. "There's—it's indecent." "Piffle, Father Forrester," she said absently. "Nothing can hurt me." Michael twisted his mouth down at his father, and went unashamedly to read over her shoulder. They were letters. As Michael put it later, they were warm, friendly, affectionate letters, seemingly from a lady to a gentleman. Continued tomorrow

Dance Club Resumes

Gervais-The Gervais Community

Dancing club will sponsor a dance for their members and friends Saturday evening. A special feature will be a new orchestra to furnish music and the directors are asking all members and their friends to attend. The club sponsors a dance once monthly but added an extra dance for a special feature for its members.
