Program Completed For State Endeavor Convention

Dallas Waiting Large Crowd For Four Days

Dallas—Final preparations are being undertaken for the session of the 50th annual Oregon state Christian Endeavor convention to be held in Dallas, April 18 to 21, with the cooperation of Polk county in its entirety.

A drive is being made to secure adequate housing for the 1000 delegates who plan to attend and all homes in the community are being solicited and everyone is asked to take care of as many of the young people as they can. Response over the county insures enthusiastic cooperation on the part of the outlying communities and it is felt that Polk county can adequately handle the convention.

This will be the first time the state sessions have ever been held in this part of the state, which is the former home of its international president, Dr. Dan Poling. Dr. Poling was born in Portland, Oregon, and as a young man attended Dallas college.

Christian Endeavor societies everywhere will observe this year as the 59th anniversary of the organization of the First Christian Endeavor society, which was organized in the Congregational church in Portland, Maine, by the pastor, Francis E. Clark, on February 2, 1881. The first Oregon society was organized in Forest Grove in 1884, only three years after the organization of the first society. In 1886, another society was organized in Corvallis under the leadership of Rev. George Lee, who is still an active pastor in Portland.

The first state convention was held in Oregon City in 1889, after a few more societies had come into existence, and conventions have been held regularly since that time. Only once during this time has Oregon been host to the international convention of Christian Endeavors, that being in 1925 in Portland. At that time, Dr. Poling was made president of the society, replacing Dr. Francis E. Clark.

The convention will be held at the old Polk county fairgrounds and the buildings are being put into shape for the event. The local committee on arrangements is headed by Bruce Spaulding, general chairman, and Rev. O. D. Harris, executive secretary.

Growers of Daffodils Get Second Harvest

Labish Center—With just a few scattering daffodil blossoms left to remind one of the four acres in bloom the past month, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Pearsall of this community are looking forward to the second harvest, the ripened bulbs. While bulb raising on a small scale has been carried on here for sometime by Walt Weinert, with sale of buds a sideline, the Pearsalls are rapidly increasing the sales in both lines. For the past four years they have been shipping thousands of buds, last year's total of 50,000 being topped this season by 20,000 or more.

During the rush season of bud-picking, a crew of three or four is employed. The buds are picked while still green and immersed in water for three hours. After removal from the water, they are placed under a drying machine, to dry the stems and avoid possible mold loss while en route. They are then packed in bunches of thirteen and placed in large pasteboard containers. A holder in the center of the box keeps them in a fixed position. Room is left on either end for the buds to expand as they bloom out in 72 hours, the time it takes them to reach their destination, Chicago, via San Francisco. All the buds are shipped to San Francisco with about half of the total relayed on to Chicago.

While the Pearsalls raise a variety of bulbs, three of the four acres are one variety, the King Alfred, which is the only variety used for bud sales. They are used exclusively because they stand well under the shipment and arrive in perfect condition. The sale total mentioned does not include the thousands of blooms sold in Salem and elsewhere, when the buds advance too rapidly to be shipped.

All this sounds like easy money for the growers, and there is also the sale of ripened bulbs to local dealers and private parties. However, bulbs cannot be grown successfully for more than two years on the same ground. Constant rotation must be observed and every three years the bulbs must be treated to a boiling bath in formaldehyde for three hours in order to keep them free from disease. The ground must be kept in excellent condition by cultivation and other methods.

The Pearsalls raise a variety of small fruits, gooseberries, currants, etc., and have an acreage of filberts, walnuts, prunes, pears and other fruits.

Road Project Near Lebanon Gets Signal

Lebanon—A WPA project sponsored by the county will be launched Thursday to make substantial improvements to an eight-mile section of the old Sweet Home highway, according to announcement by John Thoma, WPA supervisor for Linn county.

Extending from the western junction of the new and old highways by the McTimmonds place to a point where the two roads re-join by the old rock crusher, the stretch will be widened, sharp turns straightened, graded, leveled and surfaced in some parts.

Estimated total cost of the operations will be $15,214, of which federal funds will amount to $11,320 and the remaining $3894 will be furnished by the county.

The program is expected to require about six months for completion and will employ about 38 men, Thoma said. Connecting links between the old and new highways will also be improved by the plans for the project, one of them, the Santiam Terrace road, a heavily traveled stretch. Many farms are served by the section to be worked, it is said.

Lester Standard reported the rock bed and alignment of the sidewalk project over East Hill underway. This will eliminate the necessity of pedestrians walking on the narrow pavement, where serious and fatal accidents have occurred in the past months, when the sidewalk is completed.

The churches, Immanuel, Trinity and Methodist, were said to not have placed signs for one side of the street parking only during Sunday and week evening services. The officials will again be reminded that this has been legally ordered.

Al Wieckert brought up the subject that has been considered for several years, that of slippery corners on McClaine street during wet weather. He urged the council to use their influence to have the surface roughed. Just off McClaine on James avenue is "pot hole" for a half block. Efforts will be made to have the gravel road scarified and rolled.

A resolution was formulated and passed to be presented the city council, favoring wide yellow safety lines for pedestrian crossing of the street in the vicinity of the Southern Pacific depot. Sidewalks alternate from either side of the highway at this point and when any affair is held at the new senior high school in the evening, or when the students are on their way to and return from school, this place has long been felt to be a dangerous zone. Better lighting was also asked at this corner.

A member of the council reported the unnecessary speeding of cars on Mill street approaching Oak street and suggested state police aid in correcting this as the local police have no car service and are helpless in a case of speeding.

Cards will announce the next meeting to all organizations. A speaker from the office of the secretary of state, Earl Snell, will be present at the meeting the second Thursday in May.
