Eleanor Sederstrom Wins Fine Honor

University of Oregon, Eugene, May 12—Eleanor Sederstrom, Salem, has been pledged to Phi Theta Upsilon, junior women's service honorary at the University of Oregon.

Miss Sederstrom, a graduate of Salem high school, is a sophomore majoring in business administration at the university. She is treasurer of the YWCA on the campus and is affiliated with Alpha Phi sorority. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sederstrom.

With such a very short space in which to answer a reader's question, I can't feel feeling short of breath when handed a letter like this one: "Please describe the whole general procedure of what to expect at a cocktail party. How long are we supposed to stay; what do we wear; am I supposed to answer the invitation which is written on the host's Mr. and Mrs. visiting card? These people are almost strangers to us but they are very hospitable and my husband thinks we should accept. I have never been to a cocktail party before, and don't especially like food forward to this one."

Beginning then with answering the invitation. If it is a "v. p." or "please reply" is written on it, you may tele- phone your answer to one whom you know very lightly as well as to an intimate friend. But if you write an answer to the stranger, you should write on note paper in the third person. Invitations from intimate friends may be answered on your ordinary visiting card: "With pleasure Jan. 6." The inside of a double card is not a correct substitute for note paper, nor is its length necessary for a three or four-word message. If there is no request for a reply, it is not considered necessary to answer since you are going. It would, however, be courteous to send regrets if you were not going.

You wear a street dress and a hat, and your husband an ordinary sack suit. He will probably go to the party direct from his office. Even if he goes home to change, ordinary business clothes are proper. But if he is a formal type of person, he may prefer a starched shirt, black sack coat and striped trousers, which would also be correct in a formal community. At a house where peo-

Pantry Patter

New York, one of the great cities of the world, is fortunately one of the safest places to live. The water supply, the enormous quantities of milk, meat and other foods are all under the supervision of the fine Department of Health.

Even more drastic precautions than usual will be in force this summer during the World's fair, as was the case last year. A branch office of the department has been established on the fair grounds. Through this there will be continuous supervision of the sanitary conditions so that the safety and wholesomeness of the foods and drinks can be guaranteed. Every person who handles food must have a monthly examination by a physician to make sure that he has not contracted a disease which could be communicated to others. Special methods must be used for washing utensils and dishes. Visitors will be protected as far as possible while they are there.

No one but themselves, however, can protect visitors from fatigue and the digestive disturbances caused by irregular eating and unwise choice of foods. It is well known that the stomach will often rebel even when the food schedule is good if too many demands are made upon the body. There will be so much to see in a short time that many persons will be tempted to overdo physically and to forget about the importance of regular meals. Even those persons who live in New York and who can see the fair by instalments will be tempted to work too hard at sightseeing.

- Corned Beef Hash
- 2 cups chopped cooked corned beef
  - 2 cups potatoes
  - 2 onions, chopped
  - Pepper
  - 1/4 cup milk
  - 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- Mix ingredients and place in buttered baking dish. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) twenty minutes. Or cook in heavy frying pan, well buttered, until milk is absorbed, stirring frequently. Let brown on bottom, and fold like omelet.
- Baked Beans
- 1 quart pea beans
  - 1/2 pound fat, salt pork
  - 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
  - 1 teaspoon mustard
  - 1/2 cup molasses
  - Boiling water
- Soak beans in cold water overnight. Drain, cover with fresh water and simmer until skins will burst (which is best determined by taking a few of the beans on the tip of a spoon and blowing on them, when skins will burst, if sufficiently cooked). Drain beans and put in a bean pot or heavy earthenware dish. Score pork and bury in the beans. Mix salt, mustard, molasses and one cup of boiling water and pour over the beans. Add enough more boiling water to cover the beans. Cover and bake in a very slow oven (250 degrees Fahrenheit) for eight hours, adding more water if needed. Remove cover and brown during the last hour.
