

Independence Retains Dates Of Hop Fiesta

Independence—Contrary to earlier reports the officers of the Hop Fiesta association state that the Fiesta will be held as first announced, in the latter part of August and according to General Chairman John E. Black a queen will be chosen, although in a somewhat different way than in former years.

Girls will be asked to seek the crown and the name of the queen will be announced at an outdoor dance given about the middle of August and the queen selected by competent out-of-town judges officiating on a score-card system. Queen candidates will be nominated by friends who will collect free votes given out by local merchants. Under the plan the girls will have a definite vote quota, which, when reached, will entitle them to final consideration by the judges. Girls will not be required to sell anything, so says the management.

Nightly programs will be held during the last four nights in August and a number of professional entertainers will appear. The fiesta will feature an evening parade and fireworks. The parade will be torchlighted and will have a definite patriotic atmosphere. Entrants in the parade will be asked to make generous use of the national colors, torches and patriotic emblems. Many visiting delegations of ex-service men and patriotic societies are expected.

Committee appointments for the Fiesta will be read next week by R. W. Craven, president of the Hop Bowl, Inc. The Fiesta will be sponsored for the seventh consecutive year by the association.

Hop Fiesta headquarters will be in the new office building now being completed by John E. Black on Monmouth street.

Brooks "Station" Days Recalled by Writer

In Illinois, in 1847, the writer's mother was a pupil of Linas Brooks who came with his family to French Prairie and settled on the land claim where Brooks was laid out and from far and near.

Robert Crossan did a thriving saw-mill business close by where Llabish center schoolhouse stands. The nearby logs were drawn by oxen and dumped into Little Pudding river. Keen competition was kept up between Gervais and Brooks as to which would be the larger town. A few people near Brooks held large tracts of land. The population was small to begin with and Gervais took the lead, which it has kept.

Some of these large holdings were by Molsan, Ramps, Joneses, Massey, LaPrates and the DeGobins owned the large tracts which lay to the south of the Linas Brooks claim.

As a pioneer teacher in "boarding round," the author of these notes made many acquaintances and secured some interesting facts which have been helpful in later years.

The donation land claim that lies diagonally southeast of Brooks was taken by Thomas Molsan. He was born in Canada where he was a trapper and dealt extensively in furs and lumber. He was the only one of ten children to come to the United States.

About the time of 1838 he made a trip across the United States on horseback to New Orleans where he found ready market for his furs. He crossed the plains in 1840 and came to French Prairie to deal in cattle.

Mr. Molsan married Miss Harriet Longtrain of Vancouver, daughter of Andrew Longtrain, trapper and hunter, in the employ of the Hudson's Bay Co. Their children are Philomena, wife of Frank Bolter; Francis Xavier, who married Mary V. Manning, and Alexander, who married Miss Stravens of Woodburn.

Clyde Harris, well known warehouse man of Brooks, is a grandson of William Harris, pioneer blacksmith, and Mrs. Pearl Harris is a daughter of John Blaton, who owned the fine home on the corner at Brooks. This home later came into possession of Mrs. Ennis Waite, another daughter, of Salem.
