BPW Club Arranges Program

The board of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs is initiating this summer an ambitious program for the coming year which is based on women's way of life, according to very interesting news that is reaching members of the Salem club.

At its recent meeting in Asheville, N. C., which Miss Evangeline Philbin, the new president of the Oregon Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs, attended, the board devoted a major share of attention to the federation's recent study of the present status in this country of married women workers. Plans were made for an intensified campaign in the next year to do away with discrimination against married women.

With other women's organizations too, the national federation is deep in plans for a centennial congress to be held in New York in November to commemorate the progress of women between 1840 and 1940. The distinguished suffrage and peace leader, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, now in her 81st year, is chairman of the congress.

The century which the congress will celebrate, federation leaders are reminding their members, has seen women of the United States achieve the vote; has given them admission to a majority of vocations and professions and has brought them for the first time into state and national legislative bodies, into municipal state and national offices and, in one case, even into the president's cabinet.

Being warmly welcomed are Mr. and Mrs. W. Edward Rafferty and Mrs. Agnes Miller of Long Beach, Calif., who are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Klony Smith. The visitors will return south August 21.

Pantry Patter

These warm days it's a grand idea to prepare the dessert in the morning while you are still full of energy after a cool night.

A gelatin dessert is a good choice because it always adds a refreshing note to a meal. It not only can, but must be prepared ahead of time. You may choose the simplest form of jelled dessert which may be flavored with any kind of fruit juice, plus wine if you like, or with coffee. Sliced fruits or berries may be added after the jelly begins to set. For fruit jellies, a flavored gelatin is convenient. Lime or lemon will contrast well with any type of fruit.

You may vary a jelly flavored with fruit juice by beating it after it begins to set and then folding in beaten egg whites. Desserts of this type are sometimes known as whips. When flavored with lemon juice, we have the well-known snow pudding.

Then there are the charlottes and the creams which may have a milk or custard base and to which either beaten egg whites or whipped cream are added. By varying the flavor we can have apparently a new dessert each week. Desserts of this sort are very good with a sauce made from crushed fruit or with a butterscotch or chocolate sauce.

GOOD TASTE TODAY By Emily Post

Two young girls have been invited by a well-to-do and evidently awe-inspiring great-aunt to go with her to a luxurious hotel in a fashionable mountain resort. They are much worried about paying their breakfast checks! "At lunch and dinner," they tell me, "Aunt—will be with us and write the orders and sign her name for the three of us. But if she does not get up to have her breakfast with us (which is very likely) must we pay for our own breakfasts or may we sign her name? If this is right, how do we sign it without committing a forgery? And what if she says nothing about it, which she probably won't, as she is very absent-minded? What shall we do then? We haven't enough money to pay for breakfast more than twice at most—may be only once."

Answer: Since you are her guests, you may write her name for such necessities as meals, including tips. You do not imitate her signature, but merely write her name as Mrs. Green (or Miss Green), Room 789. You must not sign for any extras (or charge without signing.) Magazines or anything else bought at the newsstand must be paid for by you. Ordinarily, you should pay for your laundry and any pressing of dresses. But since she will probably expect your clothes to be fresh and neat, you might perhaps ask her frankly what to do about these items.

The Wedding Reception
Dear Mrs. Post: Does an invitation to a wedding ceremony in the garden mean that everyone will expect to stay for the reception? We can't afford to provide refreshments for many people, and really can't ask everyone to stay. A friend tells us that we should invite only the number we can have, and send announcements to the other people. Is this true?

Answer: Your friend is right—because you couldn't ask people to leave your garden any more than you could ask them to leave your house. An invitation to the wedding ceremony in church requires a separate invitation to the house, since one leaves the church and then goes elsewhere. But if people are at the house or in the garden, no extra invitation is included because it is taken for granted that they are expected to stay. You will either have to cut your list of invitations to the ceremony, or else prepare for many. You might remember, however, that the food can be very frugal. A fruit punch, a wedding cake cut into small sample pieces, and some ordinary small cakes to fill in would cost very little. In short, people would surely rather be invited to very simple provisions than not to be invited at all! Or (impossible to imagine) to be asked to go home!

Write the kind of charming, gracious letters that you see in the book, Emily Post's booklets, "The Etiquette of Letter Writing," enclosing ten cents. Address Emily Post, care of Capital Journal, P. O. Box 79, State of New York, N.Y.
