A.A.U.W. Hears Speaker At Luncheon

Dr. Ivan Milhous, a newcomer to Oregon and head of the department of education at the Oregon College of Education, praised the state's system of training elementary teachers in his introductory remarks to the Salem branch of the American Association of University Women at a luncheon Saturday, October 19.

The practical type of teacher training at the O.C.E. is superior to that found in many parts of the country.

In his main topic, "Education and the Home," the speaker outlined the main changes which have occurred in the American home in the last generation — too often a realistic concept of what home means instead of the ideal that many of us like to hold, a change in the religious concept, a relative type of ethics instead of the fixed kind, a big city culture with its impersonal characteristics, change in the position of women, the present type of recreation with its demand of a continuous stimulation, and the change in our taboos. The speaker listed some of the conclusions made by the Iowa child welfare investigation as to the relation between the I.Q. and environment. He concluded by saying that schools can get ahead in their task of improving culture only when the homes are of the best type during the formative years of the child.

The tables for the luncheon were unusually attractive with decoration of sheaves of wheat and barley, autumn leaves, and pottery vases filled with nuts and fall fruits. The decoration committee composed of Mrs. Pearl Barden, chairman, Mrs. A. C. F. Perry, Mrs. Phillip Barrett, Mrs. Joseph Harvey, Jr., and Mrs. Bert Walker was ably assisted by Glenn Hoar, Roy Wright, Robert Reider, Mrs. Parr and Mrs. Randall.
