Plans now under way for development of the Salem airport according to requirements of the national defense program are approved by the mayor and he asks the council to carry on airport improvement at all times.

The mayor again recommends that the city make use of the auditing service of the state department in checking and auditing the city's books and accounts.

In retrospect the mayor mentions the Salem Centennial. "I feel," he said, "that this report should make some mention of the success through the whole-hearted enthusiasm and cooperation of the citizens of Salem in the Salem Centennial Pageant and Celebration, and I make mention that the city council of 1940 played their part in this episode."
