Albany Will Collect Own Dog Licenses

Albany—Albany will henceforth collect its own dog license fees and provide its own administration of the state dog license law, retaining 80 per cent of the fees obtained from residential dog owners and remitting 20 per cent to Linn county.

The city council and the county court reached an agreement in accordance with the state law which gives incorporated towns the option of collecting fees and administering the law within their corporate limits.

Accordingly dog owners living within the city limits will pay their 1941 dog taxes at the city hall instead of the county clerk's office as heretofore. Owners will receive tags to be affixed to collars of dogs.

License fees are payable not later than March 1.
