Seek Relocation of Pudding River Road

A delegation of property owners residing in the Pudding river bottoms south of Mt. Angel appeared before the county court today asking for a relocation and straightening of the road through the bottoms from the Nason bridge to the Mt. Angel road, a distance of about a mile and a half. Members in the delegation were Joe and John Gaffke, Adam Vaccar, Oscar Satern and George Voz.

They stated that the road has a number of bad curves and blind corners, that it is dangerous to traffic, that several cars have gone into the ditch along the road and fatalities are apt to happen there unless a change is made. A school bus goes over the road daily and has great difficulty in making at least one of the turns, they said.

The court indicated its members would examine the road and if the property owners would furnish necessary right-of-way they might consider it for recommendation as a WPA project although made no definite commitment until they ascertain what may be done as to right-of-way matters and what they find on their examination.

Krier Released To Report for Duty in Army

At a night hearing held by Judge McMahon last evening about 9 o'clock, William Krier, 19-year old youth charged with assisting in burglarizing of Newman's Army store on Commercial street August 31, last year, waived grand jury hearing, pleaded guilty and his case was indefinitely continued for sentence. He was allowed to go on his own recognizance with instructions to report to his army captain at Ft. Lewis, Officers there had told District Attorney Miller Hayden and Officer Kiggins of the Salem police force when they picked up Krier at Ft. Lewis to bring him back to Salem they would accept the young man back for report in case he was not sentenced here.

It was brought out at the hearing that officers here have also asked army officials at Ft. Lewis to detain Arthur William Rossiter, who is charged on an information out of here with participation in the burglary of the Newman store with Krier. Rossiter is said to be a former convict at the Oregon state prison and officers say they have evidence of his complicity in the store robbery, while no charges have been lodged against Krier prior to this episode.

Rossiter is located here will be brought to Salem to face the burglary charge and if necessary Krier may be brought back as a witness as he is reported to have told the officers all of the details of the case. He is reported to have stated here was drunk at the time. His finger print was found on a window glass of the Newman store where it had been pushed through on the night the store was looted of over $500 worth of merchandise, stated the officers.

Krier was released from the county jail last night on court order with instructions from the district attorney to report at Ft. Lewis at once.

Under agreement with District Attorney Hayden after being advised as to Krier's status, the court allowed him to go to ascertain what disposition the army may make of his case. It is understood under the circumstances he may be returned into the ranks.

Barrage of Bills On Jobless Compensation

A barrage of bills designed to change various sections of the existing unemployment compensation laws are ready for introduction in the house today by Representative Manley J. Wilson (D., Glatasp-Columbia).

One of these bills is designed to make the unemployment compensation commissioners elective instead of appointed by the governor, and appears to eliminate the merit rating system for determining employers' future rates of contribution to the unemployment compensation fund.

Another bill would change the amount of necessary payrolls to come under the jurisdiction of the act. At present a minimum of $500 excludes employers, but under the new amendment, a payroll of $125 would be the minimum. It also decreases the number of individuals who must be employed to come under the act from the present 4 to merely one.

Seasonal industries also come under the act, if the repeal of the section of the Oregon Code dealing with this phase of the law is passed. At present, seasonal employees do not come under the benefits for compensation, but Wilson wishes to repeal this section.

Another Wilson bill relates to contracts between employers and contract physicians for the care of their employees. Provides that such contracting physicians shall furnish medicine, hospitalization, etc., that may be deemed necessary and advisable.

Rep. Adams (D., Multnomah), has introduced a bill to the legislation and rules committee that would broaden the scope of powers of the unemployment insurance. Additional benefits would be paid for dependent wife and children to unemployed men, providing that their weekly benefit be less than $20 per week. The individual would be entitled to an additional $3 for dependent wife, and $2 for each dependent child under the age limit of 18. The total weekly benefits shall not exceed one-sixteenth of his total wages for employment by employers during that quarter of his base period in which such total wages were highest, or the $20, whichever sum is the lesser. This places a check on the amount to be paid for dependents.

Another bill would give the commission power to decide the merits of workers who voluntarily left their jobs, and also applies to those workers discharged for misconduct. They would automatically be disqualified for the calendar week in which they left their work, and the usual waiting period is omitted. The commission would decide whether benefits should be paid these workers under the act.

give Multnomah county three more senators and six additional representatives. The latest evidence of this opposition to such a Multnomah county grab comes from the county itself, voiced in Senator Lew Wallace's plan for a constitutional amendment to reapportion the membership of the house and senate among the 36 counties on a basis of two-third population and one-third area.

Wallace's plan would scarcely disturb the present ratio of representation in either house.

Indicating that he does not propose to play along with the members of the Neuberger bloc in this matter, Speaker Farrell announced this morning that his special committee on reapportionment will consist of 11 members—three from each congressional district and two than 280 air raids during his service in England, told the committee that many people in the British government felt they were not getting all the aid they might normally expect from the United States.

Kennedy appeared before the committee to testify on the administration's proposal for lend-lease aid to the British. In a radio address last week he expressed favor for the principle of giving the British all aid short of war but made it clear he was not wholly in accord with the methods put forward by President Roosevelt.

Questioned as to whether he believed a "crisis" would develop in the next 90 or 100 days, as administrative spokesmen told the committee last week, Kennedy said he did not know exactly what was meant and that there were many things in the military situation which he did not understand.

"I have never understood, for instance, why the German army permitted a British army of 300,000 to escape from Dunkerque," he said. "If the German air force was as strong as they claimed he continued, he thought they had a perfect chance to annihilate that British force."

"The diplomat said also he could not understand why the Germans had not wrought greater destruction in Britain's industrial centers. "If they have the strength to capture the air," he said, "the crisis might come any day. So far, they haven't indicated they have that strength."

Representative Fish (R-N.Y.) asked Kennedy whether he knew the war aim of the British.

"I certainly don't, sir," the ambassador replied. "When Fish asked whether Kennedy thought something ought to be done to let this country know the nature of those war aims before proceeding with further aid to Britain, Kennedy said he did not understand the question and suggested it was one for the state department."

Britain's situation would become "serious and vital," Kennedy said, if British shipping losses continued at anything like the rate of losses prevalent previous to last month.

Stolen Check Forged, Cashed

A check which was stolen from some sample checks at the Urruh & Knapp printing establishment yesterday was later filled in with forged names by the thief and cashed at the Miller store for $25.80, the police reported today.

The check was made out on a United States National-Ladd & Bush check of the Physicians and Surgeons Hospital association in favor of John E. Peterson and signed to it was the name of C. A. Anderson, M. D., as treasurer and Martin Howard, president.

Shortly after cashing the check and giving the man who offered it all cash, Floyd Miller, of the Miller store, became suspicious and called the Physicians and Surgeons Hospital association to inquire if it was good. He was informed it was not.

During the investigation it was found that the association checks are printed by the Urruh & Knapp firm. Gardner Knapp was called in and recognized the check as one of some samples made for the association prior to printing a new batch of them.

Knapp recalled that a man had come to the printing shop yesterday and said he wanted to place an order for 15,000 checks for a dairy concern at Marshfield.

That more than one sample check may have been stolen is indicated by a report that other checks were passed in the city.
