

Concern Felt Over Safety of Damaged Silverton Bridge

Big Log Trucks Are Detoured Pending Check

Silverton — Elgin McCleary, city manager and former superintendent of the Silverton water commission, announced Thursday that concern was being felt for the safety of the Main street bridge which crosses Silver creek in the down-town section, after the surprise collapse of the James avenue bridge Tuesday afternoon.

Test figures have been before the highway officials for some time, stated McCleary, but no returns have been made. There have never been load limits posted at James avenue crossing and as a consequence any load capacity made the bridge. It was also stated that the last truck that passed over the collapsed bridge was of 54,000 pounds capacity, the limit, and some concern was evidenced as to the time when the capacity limit would be raised to 64,000 pounds.

McCleary said that he would route the heavy logging trucks from the Silverton Hills section, that have been crossing the Main street bridge enroute to Salem, and turn them by the Pudding River route as he felt the present practice was unsafe.

Two plans have been suggested for the re-opening of James avenue bridge. One is to temporarily repair the structure for pedestrian and light vehicle crossings with a strict load capacity limit, and the other is to rebuild the bridge of concrete at a cost of several thousand dollars and a term of several months. However no action will be taken until an okay from the highway department is secured on the advent to Silverton of R. H. Baldock, state highway engineer.

One local industry of national and foreign trade inclusion affected by the James avenue bridge condition, is the Cooley Commercial iris gardens that are located in the section cut off from the communities north and west of the creek.

E. G. Ricketts and Claude Darby, highway bridge engineers, and Floyd A. Query and W. W. Stiffler of the highway maintenance department were in Silverton, Wednesday, looking over the possibilities of repairs.

Grouchy Mother Bear Sounds Death Knell

Scio — The grouchy growl of a mother bear proved her undoing a few days ago in the southeast of Scio. Had she not discovered her and she might have lived to rear her two lively little cubs.

Bill Albus, Lulay employe, had felled a tree and was working on it. From the underbrush apparently nearby, Albus thought he heard a rather unusual noise. Woodsman that he is, Albus soon recognized the warning as that of a bear, and he cautiously began an investigation.

At the foot of a large stump in an underground den he managed to locate the source of the noise. The tree he had felled lay near the den, and that fact led to discovery of the bruin family—the mother and twin cubs, a male and a female.

Pat Heuberger and Elmer Limbeck went to the scene, as did several others, following announcement of the find. It was not considered advisable to tackle the family as a whole, as the mother

Peddling Bill Not Presented

Lebanon — Lack of merchant support was attributed to the failure of the Commercial club to present its proposed anti-peddling bill to the city council Tuesday night. Club members stated Wednesday afternoon.

The bill, patterned after the controversial "Green River" law now in force in other Oregon cities, was favored a week ago at a meeting of the Lebanon Commercial club, and the merchants committee circulated a petition which was to have been presented to the city council, requesting an ordinance banning house-to-house peddling and soliciting.

Lack of signers kept it from going to the council, but George Britton, club secretary, said that a drive for names will be made within the next two weeks, and that the petition will be laid before the next council session.
