Training Airplane Salvage is Light

Albany — Only the engine, instruments and equipment of the training plane which crashed northeast of Berlin Wednesday could be salvaged. It was revealed Monday by Howard Burleson, manager of the Albany airport, the fuselage was completely demolished by contact with trees in the thickly-forested area in which Otto Ohm, student pilot, was forced down.

Ohm is quoted as stating that he was forced to a low altitude by the weather conditions and was circling in an attempt to get his bearings when one wing of the plane struck a tree, spiraled and settled into other trees which broke his fall.

Ohm made his way to the Swanson logging camp, two miles away, and was taken to the hospital from there.

Eight members were present at each meeting.

Mrs. Hugh Bilyeu and Mrs. Walter Glasgow motored to Portland Tuesday on business.

Cooler Room Is Popular With Curious

Silverton — Granting that Silverton is a small town and a place of few un-maskee "stick-ups," the affair of Sunday night when Martin Knittel was relieved of $214.19 and locked up in his cooler room, is creating much personal repeating of the story by the general merchant.

Knittel is permitting his customers, those who will, the privilege of a minute or so in the cooler, just to see how it felt, knowing that you can get out, compared to wondering if you ever would. The cold air strikes at about the crown of the head of a tall man at the door beating a steady tattoo for the 50 minutes, and no cessation, as Knittel did. The sensation is bad.

The bruise in his left side was very painful Tuesday and he has contracted a cold. He was injured by one of the men striking him when Knittel asked them not to shut him in the cooler. One man kept his watch at the door. Neither was masked.

Grangers Hear Fine Reports

Sidney — Ankeny Grange held its regular meeting at the hall Saturday with W. M. C. F. Johnston, in the chair. Reports were heard from standing committees. Mrs. George Marlatt told of the activities of the Home Economics club; J. O. Farr and F. B. Simpson on legislative, the former a resolution brought before Pomona Grange recently held at Silverton Hills, and Simpson on the two-cent tax on cigarettes. Jake Gilmour reported that the college, through the county agent's office, was conducting experimental spraying of flax to exterminate weeds and so long as a weak spray was used it gave splendid results. A strong solution burns the flax.

Glen Williams told of his experience with tractors, saying those with rubber tires furnished more power than those made of steel. Following closing of Grange, George Marlatt gave a talk and told figures for the supplying of electricity for those not at present receiving it. Lunch was served in the dining room by Home Economics members in absence of committee. Refreshment committee for May; Mr. and Mrs. Al Cole and Jake Gilmour. Grange will meet May 3.
