FOR THE LOVE OF PAM

By VIVIAN GREY

Antoine
Freda smiled. "All right. Now darling, let's make up. I don't really mind your being gay with the girls down here. I know it's only window dressing. See, I've got a pretty kiss for you! Come and get it!"
Jerry laughed gently. "Minx!" he said good-humoredly. "If I hadn't fallen so in love with Pam, I'd succumb to you. As a sweet as you look, Freda, and give me back my kiss, or at least the promise it stands for. I don't really want the diamond, Freda. Accept that with my best wishes."
"It isn't best wishes I want from you, Jerry!"
He looked at the girl earnestly. His arm was around her as they began a slow stepping to the music.
"I can't give you what you should have from the man you marry, Freda. The least and the most any girl can get out of marriage is love. I mean real love, Freda. I'd never thought much of that sort of thing until Pam began to do things to my ideas and ideals."
"It's the place, darling. It's made you romantic."

party to that bet, but he hadn't done what Jerry had—made love to her, tried to make her think he was sincere while the others of his set looked on and laughed.
"But there's nothing to be afraid of," she said easily.
"That's what you think." He caught her hands. "If you knew how I feel this minute you'd be frightened to death. I'd like to steal you!"
Pam forced laughter to her lips, above tears she'd been struggling against.
"You're lovely, Pam. As lovely as a Chopin waltz." Then, bending closer: "Pam, I believe you're crying! What happened?"
"I'm not crying! Don't be silly!" The tears that she had been holding back refused to be held longer.
"I'm sorry," was his quick and understanding reply. "I beg your pardon for a stupid mistake. Now will you let me take you back to the party? You see, it's my party and I really want you there very much."
"No, I'd rather go home right now."
