FOR THE LOVE OF PAM

By VIVIAN GREY

Chapter 20
May Frisbee

Alone in his own room, Jerry wondered vaguely just how much difference this development would make with Pam and himself. Not that he doubted Pam. Money would make no difference to her. If she cared for him with money, she would care for him without it.

But he was concerned about his own share of the thing. He would have nothing to offer her. He had wasted his years pretty generally. He had made no start in business at all, due to the fact that he had always supposed his father's money would be enough to keep him.

And there were other things. His thought lingered darkly on that May Frisbee. May had been one of the gay companions of his lighter and more careless hours. And May had refused to forget. With his allowance cut off he would be unable to appease May with expensive gifts. He wondered vaguely just what her reactions would be. Probably not pleasant.

May, whom he had met at a Greenwich Village cocktail party, had fastened to him with eager good nature after their first meeting. Jerry wasn't in love with anyone, so he hadn't minded. May was quite lovely to look at. She was a dancer, she explained, soon to be "at liberty," because the show was closing. And she had remained "at liberty" after she found that Jerry was the son of the very rich Winthropes. Jerry hadn't minded. She had been an amusing and agreeable companion. That would have to stop now, and Jerry was glad.

He'd write May, he reflected, and tell her what had happened. May was a good sport and she would understand. They had never been more than gay companions. After all, he had been more than kind to her in tiding her over rough places.

He heard Lenore go into her room just before he went to sleep. It must be morning, he thought. He wondered what Vin Barroll, the local musician, was like and hoped he wasn't taking Lenore too seriously. Lenore was merely playing with the handsome youth. Jerry grinned a little as he thought of Gervase de Bellefort. Gervase had planned so much on trading his fine old name for a goodly share of the Winthrop fortune, with Lenore thrown in for good measure. It was going to be pretty tough for him, with the engagement announced.

Jerry was having a leisurely breakfast on the veranda of the Casa when Lenore appeared. Her eyes were surely as they met his. "A nice show you're making of yourself," she said as she dropped into a chair opposite him.

"If I can match you, I'm good," was Jerry's reply.

"You're going to ruin everything for me, getting serious with that basket girl. What do you suppose Gervase will say when he sees what you want to bring into the family?"

"If he has any sense he'll say he envies me."

"Idiot! If you'd just play around with her, it would be understandable. But getting serious."

"I know," Jerry was suddenly very serious. "That would be beyond your ken. Well, you really haven't much to worry about Lenore. Not about de Bellefort, I mean."

When he knows what's happened he'll be breaking the engagement anyhow."

"Perhaps if you'll begin to talk sense, I'll listen to you."

"I'm talking more sense right now than I ever have. We're broke Mother will slip you the new program this morning, and it is going to burn you up!" He had finished his coffee and was rising. Lenore turned away from him. She hadn't believed him, of course.

Stephens in Seattle
Fairview - Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Stephens of Klamath Falls, where the former was employed with state highway construction, have moved to Seattle, Mr. Stephens expected a two-weeks vacation but three days was all the time given before he began working for Boeing Aircraft.

Some structures like tall bridges and towers take a heavy toll of migrating birds that dash against them.

SCHOOL TIES-In his customary boater (hat), a lad from exclusive Harrow school lines up with less-schooled seventeen-year-olds at a labor exchange in London, to register under new conscription law. Harrow had its boys register at these labor exchanges, as an example to other British public schools, which had sought special facilities. Boy alongside is a Home Guard.
