'BLACK HOLE'—Since 1902 this shaft in Calcutta has marked the spot where on a torrid June 20, 1756, the 146 persons who remained after the capture of Fort Williams by Suraj-ud-Dowlah, nawab of Bengal, were forced into a two-windowed guard room. It was 18' x 14' 10", and only 23 persons were alive next day. This was the 'Black Hole of Calcutta.'

Is it Love? by MARGARETTA BRUCKER

Sue Ellen has come home from shopping in her Mississippi home town of Tyler Springs disturbed because a good looking Yankee soldier from Camp Shelby spoke to her in the drug store. Or perhaps it is the question of whether the lovely Rivington Moore enough to marry her next month. Now Riv has dropped in—and Sue Ellen senses something wrong, and is still more worried.

Chapter Two

He avoided her serious glance. "I can't get married now," he said impatiently. "I can't tell you why—it isn't necessary. We'll be married in June. I'll see you about seven. Ginny Fairchild asked me to bring you by for a drink before we go out to the dinner dance at the Country Club."

Then, as Sue Ellen hesitated, he said angrily: "You'll have to go. There'll be enough gossip as it is about the postponement of our wedding. If we're seen together to-night—what can they say?"

"Nothing," said Sue Ellen, "nothing to us, Riv, but I know what they'll say and you know what they'll say."

"You mean—"

"They'll say Deedora Waller made you change the date of our wedding."

Sue Ellen knew her accusation that Deedora Waller was responsible for her postponed marriage would enrage Riv, and it did. He sprang up, his lean face white, his mouth a hard straight line.

"What do you mean?" he demanded hotly.

"Just what I said, Riv. Before Deedora came from up north to live in Tyler Springs, we had no misunderstandings. Quarrels, yes, for you have a high temper and so have I, but I didn't have my friends hinting that your father would like nothing better than to have you marry Deedora instead of me. I didn't feel free to save engagements with other men, even in your absence, but you did not hesitate to be seen constantly with Deedora."

Riv turned his back on her and strode across the room. He passed at the mantle and stood staring blankly at the portrait of Aunt Carolina which hung above it. He never turned, even when he spoke.

"You know why I had to take Deedora around. The Colonel sold Jim Waller the old Fairchild plantation at a time when the sale meant a lot to him and to me. To you, too—if you weren't so insanely jealous, you would see that. Our future depended upon that sale, and when it pleased old Jim to have me escort his daughter, I had to do it."

"You might have explained to me why you did it."

"It isn't necessary to make explanations to anyone who loves you," said Riv stubbornly.

Unwilling her heart softened toward him. He faced her now and his handsome face was miserably unhappy, his dark eyes pleading. He caught the gentleness in her face and rapidly crossed the room to sit down beside her, his nervous hands caught and held her small cold ones. "Are we going to let a misunderstanding wreck our love affair?" he asked winningly. "Look up, honey. There—"

He had her in his arms. Arms lightning about her as though he would never let her go. Her own hurt and bewilderment made her cling to him, even to respond as she had never responded to his caresses.

When Riv released her, she was weak and shaken. The hurt remained, buried deep in her heart. Later, when Riv was gone, it would not be easy to drive away the thought that Riv, in spite of his protests of affection, gave no real reason for the postponement of their wedding.

"Love me?" asked Riv against her soft dark hair.

"If I didn't love you, you couldn't hurt me, could you?"

"Listen. In June we'll have the finest wedding ever given in Tyler Springs. I'll get the Colonel to fix things up so that I can give you Belle Acres for my wedding gift. That make you happy?"

She nodded. The possession of Belle Acres was her dearest wish, she thought. But after Riv had left her sitting alone in the dusk, the question she had asked Aunt Car returned to frighten her. Did she love Riv?

BOMBAY SCENE—Beyond this famous "Gateway to India" scene of above ceremonial stretches the harbor of Bombay, seaport on the west coast of India's V-shaped peninsula. In India, which is now asking England for self-rule, or freedom, or dominion status, is a federation embracing British India—provinces under British rule—and the native-ruled states.
