The dinner was served in the arbor from a table covered with a yellow and white cloth, which was centered with an arrangement of late summer flowers in tones of yellow and orange, in a long oval container of copper. Appointments were of chartreuse and white. Lighting the table were two tall antique, Philippine hurricane lamps, which were metal based.

During the later evening hours a series of scenic and garden slides were shown by the hostesses, for the pleasure of their guests.

Covers were placed for Mrs. R. Franklin Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Canfield, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Rieder, Mrs. Melvin Lord, Miss Lord and Miss Schryver.

Free Medical Advice By Voluble Amateurs

By J. H. Willitt Of the Capital Drug Store

Cheerfully, freely, insistently, your friends will advise you how to treat any malady under the sun, from arthritis to beri beri, from malaria to psoriasis.

As a matter of cold fact no advice could be more expensive than this so freely given. Your partner at bridge, your casual traveling companion, your dearest friend do not know your symptoms, would not understand them if they did, are not in a position to diagnose and prescribe for your illness.

Only a qualified physician can correctly understand and treat your case. Confide your difficulties only to him.

It is equally important to obtain medication only from a trained and dependable man—a carefully selected druggist.

Irish People Awed by Electric Juicer

On special assignment to cover the American forces now in Ireland, Beverly Smith, writing for the American Magazine, presents an absorbing article. Highlighting the story is an anecdote revealing in sharp outline the reaction of the Irish to a custom that is as traditionally American as good coffee.

Smith's story says in part: "The local people were impressed by the beautiful American scientific equipment, but what knocked them for a loop was a scene in back of the hospital kitchen, where an American army cook, a former soda jerk from Dallas, Texas, had hitched up an electric orange squeezer to the hospital generator. Working expertly with both hands from a crate full of American oranges, he was sending a gushing stream of fresh, golden juice into buckets for hospital patients.

The local citizens abandoned other work and watched in awe. Every now and then the cook would seize an empty orange hull, fill it with fresh juice, and hand it to an eager child. People in America hardly realize how many of their ordinary comforts of life are miracles to the people in wartorn Europe."

Over 2,000 juice extractors have been purchased by various government agencies since November, 1941. It is known that many of these sturdy electric extractors have been placed in service by United States army hospitals and it could well be one of them described in Smith's article. Fresh oranges and lemons have an important place in army diets for their healthful properties, and as this story indicates, United States soldiers are getting the same well balanced diets overseas that prevails in United States training camps.

First Things Come First War Calls Must Go Through

A cherished tradition among telephone men and women is that "the message must go through."

War messages for the sake and safety of all of us must go through first.

The demands of War are placing a load on our Long Distance lines often beyond their capacity.

It is impossible to build more switchboards and lines because materials such as copper must be used in making munitions and weapons.

You who use the telephone in these critical times can aid in getting War messages through promptly and in cutting down possible delays on your own essential calls if you will—

Be brief—Plan what you want to say. Make calls only that you find essential. Place your calls by number and use station-to-station service. Answer your telephone promptly.

Your cooperation in these simple matters will make possible the maximum use of existing voice highways. Thank you for your help.
