RECURRENT HEADACHES

Recurrent attacks of migraine headache indicate a highly organized, sensitive, restless person who above all needs to learn self control and discipline and how to take life calmly and naturally.

Treatment by a physician is imperative both for relief and prevention of recurring attacks. Each person has his or her own individual make-up to consider which the doctor must study and treat in an individual way.

The expert attention of the physician must be followed by the skilled work of a trained pharmacist. His proficiency and knowledge are priceless protection for your health.
