Finsley Talks On Paroles

Parole and marriage are alike in that only the bad ones make the headlines. Fred Finsley, state director of parole and probation, told the Kiwanis club Tuesday noon. Eighty-five percent of men released on parole make good and no institution, either church or schools, has a 100 percent record, he asserted. The parole system is the least understood of all state departments or activities, Finsley said.

Parole does not carry the element of forgiveness or clemency and is not to be confused with probation or released under "good time" credits, the speaker said. Under parole a man serves out the remainder of his sentence while still under jurisdiction of the state.

Daily, 215 men and women in the nation are released from penal institutions, Finsley said. Approximately three percent of those received die in prison and the average term is only two years. From an economic standpoint, he said that it costs $300 a year to keep a person in prison while parole supervision costs from $50 to $60 each. All those released should be under supervision until they prove they can readjust or rehabilitate themselves. Save one in a dozen, and the time and money spent is justified, he said in closing.

The club set May 11 for the annual ladies' night program.

Superintendent Frank B. Bennett addressed the group. The annual election of officers resulted in the elevation of Mrs. Florence Kron of Parrish to the presidency. Mrs. Dwight Lear of Garfield was elected vice president; Mrs. Marjorie Whiteley of McKinley, secretary, and Mrs. Jane Colgan of Richmond, treasurer.

Folkes Murder Jury Deliberating on Verdict

Albany, Ore., April 21 (AP)—Eight women and four men jurors began life-or-death deliberations at 10:15 a.m., PWT today in the first-degree murder trial of Robert E. Lee Folkes, accused of the fantastic "lower 13" knife slaying of Mrs. Martha Virginia James. The jurors—mostly farm folk—took the case with Circuit Judge L. G. Lewelling's detailed instructions after hearing testimony and arguments for 13 days in the trial of the 20-year-old negro second cook of a Southern Pacific limited.

Judge Lewelling told the jury it could return any one of four verdicts: Guilty of murder in the first-degree which automatically calls for the death penalty if unaccompanied by a recommendation for leniency; first degree with a recommendation for life imprisonment; second degree which carries mandatory life imprisonment; or acquittal.

The court dwelt upon the issue of intoxication at length during his 43-minute instruction.

If the jurors found the evidence showed Folkes was intoxicated at the time he made his alleged confession of the crime, Lewelling said, this fact should be considered although intoxication does not make a confession inadmissible as evidence unless the person making the confession has lost possession of his faculties.

As to intoxication at the time of the crime, Lewelling said that if the jurors ascertained that the evidence showed Folkes was intoxicated, this should be weighed. But he stressed that intoxication does not excuse a crime.

"Intoxication, in the main," he said, "should be weighed in deciding the degree of guilt."

The court warned the jury against permitting the "sympathies, sentiment and public approval or disapproval to sway you in reaching a verdict."

Folkes remained impassive, seemingly bored, during the court's instructions.

Sub Wahoo Returns After Sinking 13 Jap Ships

Pearl Harbor, April 21 (AP)—The submarine Wahoo has returned from its second adventure in enemy waters with another eight ships sunk for a total of 13 in two successive patrols. Naval officials said the eight bagged in the second patrol was a record number for a single patrol, but Lieut. Cmdr. Dudley W. (Mush) Morton, skipper of the Wahoo, described the exploit as "just cut and dried sinking of ships."

"It was just sight, track, shoot and sink," said the 36-year old Miami, Fla., officer.

Besides the eight ships, totaling 37,000 tons, the Wahoo damaged a ninth and wrecked a trawler and two sampans. The sinking were all achieved within one week's time. For the two patrols, the first in January, the total tonnage sunk was 69,000.

Morton admitted he got a thrill one night when a Japanese tanker's five-inch shell fell close to the Wahoo's bow, forcing the Wahoo to submerge. The submarine resurfaced later and sank the tanker within 45 minutes.

"The same night we sighted and tracked a small freighter," Morton related. "We surfaced and sank him by gunfire shortly before daylight."

"While we were sinking him another small ship showed up. At first we thought it too small to bother with but it turned out to be a small, neat diesel-powered freighter. So we turned on him. I don't know why he didn't run. We closed fast as we could on the surface and sank him by gunfire. The men love to shoot the guns because so many participate and see the battle."

The submarine's crew formed the Wahoo commandos and pleaded with their commander for permission to board that trim little freighter.

"They wanted to board her and get fresh fish before she sank but the weather wouldn't permit it," Morton explained.

As soon as the Wahoo had neared combat area, the crew tuned in on the Tokyo radio.

"The Japs gave us a propaganda broadcast that the submarine menace had been erased," Morton said, "then we got nine ships in seven days (eight sunk, one damaged). But the boys want you to tell the Japs they are tired of so much xylophone music. Every program is full of xylophones."
