Woman Doctor, Soldier Blushes

London, April 21 (AP)—A dispute in commons over whether modest soldiers must strip for inspection by women doctors ended in cheers Tuesday when a government spokesman announced a new rule of privacy whereby troops would be given the right of inspection by their own sex only—if they specifically require it.

Major Arthur Henderson, financial secretary of the war office, terminated debate by announcing that wherever possible such periodical examinations "must be carried out so as to produce, so far as is possible, the atmosphere of a clinic rather than of a parade."

Captain F. J. Bellenger, laborite, raised the issue. He cited the case of a 40-year old noncommissioned officer, who is the father of grown-up children. Bellenger said that the non-com was lined up for inspection and was amazed to find a 24-year old woman doctor waiting to examine him. The M.P. quoted from the soldier's letter of protest:

"I stripped to the waist but when she requested me to drop my trousers, I was so embarrassed I just couldn't do it."

Bellenger commented that many soldiers and sailors "for all sorts of reasons—it may be an age-long inhibition—would resent a request such as that."

Commander Sir Archibald Richard James Southby, conservative, said no officer or soldier would be unwilling to accept the services of a woman doctor in case of accident or emergency. In the case of routine examination, he added, "a man is entitled to have his feelings of decency and modesty respected."

An Anticlimax

And there is an anticlimax to the story. Of the 64 who got away, nine subsequently were killed or are missing in action and one is a prisoner of Germany.

Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr., now U. S. commander in the South Pacific, commanded the task force that carried the planes to within 800 miles of Tokyo. Halsey had planned to carry the fliers to within 400 miles of Japan, but an encounter with an enemy patrol vessel —which was sunk—spoiled that plan.

Doolittle was the first to take off from the Hornet in one of the specially-equipped, twin-engined North American "Mitchell" bombers at 8:20 a.m., on April 18, 1942. Shortly, all 16 were in the air headed toward Tokyo after takeoffs in a heavy sea that sent waves over the carrier's bow and forced the pilots to take their takeoffs with the up-beat of the flight deck.

Bombing a Success

The primary objective of the mission—to bomb the Japanese mainland — was accomplished "with complete success," the war department said. Not a single American plane was lost in Japan proper.

What is more, the war department assured, Tokyo is due to be hit again.

"If the secrecy (of Shangri-La) could always have been kept from the Japanese—which in the end was impossible—it would naturally have added to the tension with which Japan awaits the attacks that still lie ahead," the report said.

Jap Planes Frozen

Besides its destructive and psychological effects, the war department emphasized, the raid resulted in freezing within Japan, enemy warplanes and other forces which might have been used in offensive operations elsewhere."

This was one of the deciding factors in the decision to keep details of the American operations a secret for more than a year. This was why President Roosevelt referred to the raid base as "Shangri-La," a mythical place.

Allocation of Tax Surplus Fund to Schools Explained

Approximately 250 school district clerks, board members and officials from over the county were at a meeting at the courthouse Wednesday evening called by County Superintendent Mrs. Agnes C. Booth and listened to C. R. Bowman of the state department of education explain how Marion county's share of the $5,000,000 from surplus state income taxes will be allocated to the districts of the county.

Bowman stated that a certain share of the total fund will come to the county based on total attendance during the school year. The total attendance figure cannot be computed until June.

The sum coming to the county will then be allocated to the various school districts also on the basis of total attendance but the shares will go to those districts only which have special levies.

Each district will receive a share of the fund up to the amount of its individual total attendance and this will be an offset against the special levy, if any, for that district. If the total attendance figures in a district are such that the amount received is less than the special levy, then it will be credited only with the amount equivalent to the special attendance. If it is more than the total levy, the credit given will only be up to the amount of such levy.

All sums left over will be put into a second pot, and this will be then divided among the other districts on the same basis. If funds are left over after this division, still another division will be made, and so on until the fund is exhausted. Bowman stated as a rule not more than three divisions would be needed in any one county to clean up the fund allotted to it.

The money must be used as an offset against property tax and for that reason only those districts having a special levy will be benefited by it.

School boards will go ahead and make their budgets as usual. When these budgets reach the assessor's office he will give credit on the tax rolls for any moneys received from the surplus income tax source and taxpayers will merely pay less taxes. The school boards, in making up their budgets, cannot take into consideration such surplus funds and raise their budgets accordingly. Such funds will come under the 6 per cent limitation required by the constitution.

British 8th Army

tern Tunisia at 9:30 p.m. Monday.

At the zero hour, thousands of British infantrymen, armed with Tommy guns and special knives for hand-to-hand fighting, moved out across no man's land and up the rock-strewn, shrub-covered slopes of the mountains guarding the approaches to the Tunis plain.

A curtain of artillery fire bursting only a few yards ahead of the advance troops paved the way for a successful assault on Enfidaville and the other objectives.

Djebel Garci Captured

A front dispatch from Ned Russell, United Press war correspondent with the eighth army, said the British also captured Djebel Garci, a 1,200-foot height dominating a large area of Rommel's mountain defenses a few miles west of Enfidaville.

Despite the initial British successes, however, Russell said German Marshal Erwin Rommel still holds a formidable string of bridges north of Enfidaville and Djebel Garci, which presumably make up his main defenses for Tunis.

Russell said the terrain was the most difficult yet encountered by the eighth army in its 2,000-mile pursuit of Rommel's Afrika Korps from El Alamein, Egypt, and allied observers here warned that any advance would be slow.

Rommel is known to have fortified the hills along the Enfidaville line with hundreds of guns.
