Bennett Named Councilman

Dallas—Albert J. Bennett, president of the local AFL organization was named ward 3 councilman to succeed William C. Retzer, resigned, at the Monday night meeting of the Dallas city council. Retzer, whose terms of service as councilman have extended over 14 years, recently moved to another ward.

Mayor Frank E. Kersey paid tribute to the work of Retzer on the council, mentioning in particular, his service as building committee chairman at the time the city hall was constructed. Retzer's service as chairman of the fire and water committee was lauded by Walter L. Young, fire chief. Elected councilman, for the first time in November, 1928, Retzer assumed the office January 1, 1929. He had served over two years on his present term, which ends December 31, 1944.

To take the place of Retzer as chairman of the fire and water committee, Mayor Kersey appointed Hollis Smith, now serving on the finance committee. Bennett will take Smith's place on the finance committee.

Bids for exclusive garbage franchise in the city were received from Earl Hoffman and Neils Fast. Hoffman's bid, which was not on the prescribed form outlined by the ordinance, was disregarded. East's bid was accepted by the council and the franchise period extended to ten years.

The curfew law was amended, raising the age limit for children affected from 16 to 18 years, at the suggestion of John R. Allgood, police committee chairman, who reported that the committee after discussing the existing curfew law, favored the change. In regard to the advisability of having a police patrol on call, which matter was referred to the committee at a previous meeting, Allgood said the committee considered it unnecessary at the present time.

At the conclusion of the regular meeting, the budget committee was organized, with Earle Richardson chosen chairman and Cecil Riggs, secretary. Named by Richardson as a sub-committee to prepare the budget for presentation at the next meeting, were Maurice Dalton, C. B. Sundberg and Walter Williams.

Unified Drive For Tin Cans

Dallas—Plans for a unified tin can salvage drive in Polk and Marion counties were made at a recent meeting at the Salem Chamber of Commerce by representatives of salvage committees and school authorities from the two counties. The campaign is to be carried on through the schools and is to get underway at once. It will continue until May 19, when the cans will be picked up by trucks of beverage bottling companies.

Lowell Jones of Salem, president of the Oregon State Bottling association, will have charge of the can pick-up in both Marion and Polk counties, following collections by the schools. Beverage bottling companies are generously donating the use of their trucks and drivers for the pick-up on May 19, and in order to facilitate the collection, certain places in both counties will be designated as collection centers. Schools will be asked to bring their cans to the center nearest them when the drive in their school district has been completed.

These centers for Polk county will be announced within the next few days. However, schools are asked to start at once on the collection campaign in their own district so that every available can may be collected and ready for delivery to the nearest center by the May 19 pick-up deadline.

This is the first county-wide can salvage campaign for Polk county and will be the last until fall. Rod Finney, executive secretary of the state salvage committee, who was present at the Salem meeting, stressed the fact that cans are essential in salvaging copper, that every ton of cans means 1500 pounds of copper and 20 pounds of tin, both of these strictly essential to war uses.

Anticipating response on the part of housewives and students in Polk and Marion counties, two railroad cars are being ordered to carry the cans to a detinning plant.
