Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an aquamarine silk suit and white accessories, and carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds, gardenias and bouvardia.

The honor attendant, Miss Vilma Brandon of Portland, chose a beige suit, with which she wore matching accessories. Her corsage was of pink sweet-peas and carnations.

John Thomas of Portland acted as best man for Lieutenant Johnson and Albert Evans was the usher.

Following the ceremony the couple greeted their friends at a reception in the church parlor.

Spring flowers were used in decorating the room and the table, which was centered with the wedding cake, decorated with arrangements of sweet-peas and bouvardia and lighted by white tapers.

Zontians Make Post-War Plans At Lake Placid Convention

Eight members from the sixth district of Zonta International in attendance at the national convention held at Lake Placid this summer, will report on the convention and recount their experiences at the fall conference of the district, when it opens in Eugene in October. Those attending the fall conference from Oregon and Washington, the states comprising the sixth district, will be told of the program outlined by the delegates at the conference and of their plans for the study of post-war problems, which included the passing of resolutions for consolidation of war service now underway.

Arousing the interest of delegates on the subject of women in a world of change, was Dr. Charlotte Whitton, former executive director of the Canadian welfare council, who urged that women concentrate on governmental affairs, questions of health and conditions of occupation, during the period of transition from war work back to home and pre-war jobs. She emphasized the fact that war has changed the viewpoint of many women to such an extent that they will need interests not formerly required when they return to peace-time occupations.

Stating that "We are certain to have a great nation out there in the East in the next twenty years, but the kind of nation we get will depend in large measure on the cooperation and support we give the Chinese now," Miss Marion Dudley stressed the high morale of the Chinese people. The speaker, who was affiliated with the YWCA in China, and was formerly located in Hong Kong, where for six months she was a prisoner of the Japanese, spoke of the great influence that the repeal of the Exclusion Act would have on the people of that country.

From Washington, D. C., where she headed the research department of the now defunct national resources planning board, came Dr. Eveline M. Burns to present a plan for the abolishment of unemployment and want, in which most of the burden would fall on private industry with the government aiding by providing worthwhile paid jobs. Security would be provided for those too old to work, for the ill and otherwise incapacitated and for those not
