Delegate (P)—Foreign Minister Guillermo Toriello Garrido (above), of Guatemala, the first foreign diplomat to arrive for the United Nations conference, as he left his plane in San Francisco.

and general manager. I have hoped for this for a long, long time. "Me—they elected Me—general merchandise manager—" Christopher started at her in blank amazement. "Why that's impossible!" Sheer incredulity crowded out every other consideration, as he looked at her in bewildered silence. The thing was unreal, fantastic. They never put young men in a position like that, and he was just twenty-six. At last he said in a low voice, "I can't qualify for a position like that."

He eyed her levelly for a moment, then he added quickly, "I think a store is the dullist place in the world. It doesn't interest me in the least. Nothing of any importance ever happens in a store—people just go on and on, mechanically, all the days of their life. Work; get old; and then take their pensions. Nothing ever happens in a store. Duchess, and that's the God's truth. I'll have none of it."
